"Heart of Chicago."

Lincoln J. Carter's "Heart of Chicago" will be seen at Loveday Opera House on Monday night—Oct. 9th.

This play has been before the public for almost a score of years, and has played in every town and most of the theatres in the United States and Canadian provinces. That such an attraction could keep in the good graces of the theatre goers for so long a time, there must be something of more than ordinary merit in the play. Aside from the strongly written lines and well connected story, the scenic effects are the most novel of any melodrama on the road. The story is familiar to every theatre patron and needs no explanation. An excellent cast is said to be with the attraction this season. Mr. Carter has tried to select from the best members of the various companies that have appeared in the piece in recent years, and how well he has succeeded is voiced by a general approval by the leading critics where the piece has played this season. Some exceptionally clever vaudeville acts are shown during the action of the play, whose local permits of the introductions in such a manner as not to distract from the story of the play. Seats now selling.

Announcement.

The State Board of Library Commissioners wishes to announce that through a more generous appropriation of the last legislature, it has been possible to appoint a Library organizer, who will act under the direction of the Board in extending the library interests of the state. The work of this organizer will be to visit every county in the state for the purpose of investigating library conditions and getting, so far as possible, correct statistics regarding school, township and free public libraries, in order that the aid offered by the state may be better understood and more generally accepted. The organizer hopes to work with the cooperation and under the advice of the county commissioners of schools in their respective counties, whose experience and familiarity with conditions will aid greatly in the work.

The organizer will attend the teachers' institutes, and demonstrate to the teachers the help which is offered to them by the state. Traveling libraries will be exhibited and explained, all attendant expenses being paid by the Board.

At a meeting of the Board held in Saginaw, September 9th, Mr. Roy C. Lyle, of Grand Rapids, was appointed library organizer. Work will commence in October and be actively carried on. During the school year Mr. Lyle will be at the service of the county commissioners of schools, and will appreciate the valuable aid which they can give him in connection with this important educational work.

JAMES B. PETER, President.
MARY C. SPENCER, Secretary.

The apportionment of state taxes for the coming year, recently determined by the auditor general and forwarded to the county treasurers, shows a reduction of more than one hundred and thirty thousand dollars as compared with the total taxes of two years ago. The comparison is made with two years ago because of the fact that the odd years of apportionments, directly following the legislative sessions, include the entire expense of the legislative sessions and many other items of state expenses not shared by the next year. That an actual reduction should be made in the expense of maintaining our rapidly growing state institutions, including unusual provisions, for their enlargement and improvement, is a showing for care and economy on the part of those responsible for such a result that is worthy of the highest credit.

Juvenile Court Law.

There were few measures of more importance enacted by the last legislature than what is known as the truancy law which became operative recently. The purpose of this law is to provide means through which children of school age can be compelled to attend school, former measures in that direction providing almost worthless in the country districts of the state. It has been officially estimated that hardly sixty per cent of the children of school age have attended school through the periods required by the state law. In some of the most progressive counties of the state children of parents who could well afford to send them to school have permitted them to pass the school age unable to either read or write. This is an offense against all the people of the state which the new law is intended to prevent.

For this purpose the act creates in each county a Juvenile Court, before which the county agent may cause any such child to be brought upon his own motion or upon complaint of any citizen, and upon examination the child may be remanded to the custody of parent or guardian, or placed on probation under charge of the county agent or other probation officer appointed by the court, or may be committed to the Industrial School or other state institution suitable for such child, as the court shall determine; or the child may be placed in a hospital when needful, or in care of some reputable citizen, or to some association devoted to the care of neglected children, by approval of the state board of corrections and charities. No child under twelve years of age can be committed to any jail or police station, nor be brought anywhere in contact with adult persons charged with crime.

Among the sixteen other general acts affecting the management of schools in this state, passed at the recent session, is one in regard to the mill tax, providing that when the balance on hand in a district treasury equals the amount paid for teachers' wages, the mill tax shall not be assessed that year. Another requires the school census to be taken during the fifteen days prior to the first Monday in June, and changes the date of the annual school meeting to the second Monday in July, and of the annual meeting of the school inspectors to the first Monday in August; and by another act the commissioner is required to forward inspectors' reports to the state superintendent before the 15th day of September.

John Wanamaker, one of the largest advertisers in the country, and one of the most successful merchants, recently expressed the following sentiment: "There is only one way to advertise, and that is to hammer your name, your location, your business, so persistently, so thoroughly, into the people's heads that if they walk in their sleep they would constantly turn their faces toward your store. The newspaper is your best friend in spite of your criticism. It helps to build up the community that supports you. When the day comes that the newspapers are dead, the people are near the edge of the grave, with no one to write their epitaph."

FOR BOTH

One disease of thinness in children is scrofula; in adults, consumption. Both have poor blood; both need more fat. These diseases thrive on leanness. Fat is the best means of overcoming them; cod liver oil makes the best and healthiest fat and

There's Money in Growing Ginseng!

Prof. W. L. Howard of the Missouri State Agricultural College says: "I advise American farmers to cultivate Ginseng. Big profits may be realized. It is a hardy plant and is easily grown." A recent bulletin issued by the Pennsylvania State Agricultural College in part says: "The supply of native Ginseng root is continually diminishing and the price per pound is correspondingly increasing, while the constant demand for the drug in China stands as a guarantee of a steady market for Ginseng in the future." The market for our cultivated root will exist as long as the Chinese exist." Counsel General W. A. Rublee of Hong Kong says in the U. S. Consular reports: "The sale of Ginseng root grown in America is very large here and the demand is so great that much more could be disposed of advantageously. The root is as indispensable to the 400,000,000 Chinese as is their rice."

Ginseng is a staple on the market the same as corn, wheat and cotton. The present market price varies from $5.00 to $8.00 per pound according to quality, while the cost of production does not exceed $1.50. There is room in an ordinary garden to grow several hundred dollars' worth each year. The plant is hardy and thrives in all parts of the United States and Canada, except in the arid regions. We are successful growers and can show you how to make money growing Ginseng. You can get a good start in the business for a small outlay, and soon have a comfortable income. We have several thousand choice roots for sale for fall delivery. The planting season begins in August and continues till the ground is frozen. Write us today for further particulars.

LITTLE EXPLOSIONS

His Only Relief. A couple of spectators on the golf links were amused by the antics of one of the players, who was waving his arms about like a windmill in a fit.

There was some slight waging as to the cause of his strange conduct, one section favoring the idea of a sudden attack of toothache, and another that of St. Vitus' dance, accentuated by a wasp sting.

A caddy was approached, and whispering asked for an explanation. The boy burst out laughing. "You needn't whisper," he said; "he wouldn't hear ye if you was to fire off a hehly-one ton gun. He ain't got nothink the matter with him. He's deaf and dumb, and that's the only way he's got of swearin'!"

Making Sure. It is customary in the cheaper classes of German inns to substitute chicory for coffee. Bismarck was aware of this, so one day when he came to a small inn, after a long journey, he sat down and called the innkeeper to him.

"Have you any chicory?" said he. "Yes, sir," said the innkeeper. "Well, bring all you have here to me," ordered Bismarck.

The innkeeper was gone a few minutes, and returned with an immense armful of chicory. "Is this all the chicory you have in the house?" asked Bismarck. "Yes—all."

"Well, then," said Bismarck, "leave this chicory here and make me a cup of coffee."

He—There is nothing pleasanter than to talk to the one you love best. She—How awfully tired you must get of talking to yourself!

Calming Him. The other day a careless mason dropped a brick from the second story of a building on which he was at work.

Leaning over the wall and looking down, he saw a respectable citizen with his hat jammed over his eyes. The mason, in tones of apprehension asked: "Did the brick hit any one down there?"

The citizen, with great difficulty extricating himself from the extinguisher into which his hat had been transformed, replied, with considerable warmth: "Yes, sir, it did; it hit me."

"That's right," exclaimed the mason in tones of undisguised admiration. "Noble man! I would rather have wasted a thousand bricks than have you tell me a lie about it."—Evchange.

Not in Business Now. "After I had seen all the historic spots in New York city," remarked a Westerner, "I began looking up the places of interest near by. One day my wife and I went over to Weehawken for the purpose of visiting the spot where Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr fought their duel.

After leaving the ferry I accosted a native thus: "Would you be so kind as to tell me where Hamilton and Burr had their famous quarrel?"

"Wal, now, let me see," replied the Jerseyite, "that's the firm that was blazin' out the Palisades, wasn't it? Wal, they ain't quarryin' here no more—ain't ben here for some time back!"

Argumentum ad Hominem. The conversation had become slightly personal.

"You lunkhead!" exclaimed the man with the rotund face. "If you had any conception of the properties of matter you would know that it has all the characteristics of what we call mind. Matter, sir, thinks! It thinks!"

"I wonder," snorted the other man, "what the rest of your face thinks that that big red nose of yours!"

A Great Light Breaks. Proser—"Your friend Barrett is dead."

Poet—"Impossible! Why, I was at his rooms last night reading my latest poem to him."

Proser—"Come along with me to the inquest, then. The coroner is still in the dark as to what caused that sudden release."—Cleveland Leader.

His Plea. Magistrate—"Now, then, prisoner, what have you to say for yourself?" Prisoner—"Well, suh, I done admittance de trufe of all dat's ben testified agin me, Jedge, but I jes' natchelly hope dat yo' is gwine to be easy wif me, kase I hyar yo' is a mercenary gem'an."—Philadelphia Press.

A Correction. "A prophet is without honor in his own country," said the intimate friend.

"You don't mean that," responded Mr. Scaddsbey. "You mean that honor is without profit."—Detroit Tribune.

His Wife at Another Resort. Nordy—"Gaydog is a devoted husband. Every Friday he drops business, buys a lot of candy and stuff that women like and runs down to the seashore and stays until Monday. His wife ought to be proud of him."

Butts—"Oh, I don't know. His wife is in the mountains."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Moving Cheese. "Will you start the cheese this way, please?" said the thin boarder at dinner.

"It's not time for cheese, yet," said the fat boarder.

"No, but if you start it now it will probably get here by the time I'm ready for it."—Yonkers Statesman.

An Award for the Frame. "I am glad you saw my painting," said D'Auber. "I tell you I am proud of that honor."

"What honor?" inquired Dumley. "Didn't you see the label, 'honorable mention' on it?"

"Not on your painting. That was on the frame."—Sketch.

Such a Foolish Question. Mrs. Neulich—"My husband bought a lovely ocean landscape yesterday. Mrs. Neighbors—Indeed! Is it an oil or water color?"

Mrs. Neulich—"Water, of course. Didn't I just say it was an ocean landscape?"

The Wide Margin of Doubt. "They paid him a big salary, didn't they?"

"That's what he said."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Similar Case. "I contend," said the fat man, "that Wanamaker had a right to dine with Booker Washington."

"Yes?" queried the stranger in that tone of one who was having conversation thrust upon him.

"Yes, and Southern newspapers are making too much fuss about it! Why should they kick because Wanamaker dined with Booker Washington?"

"Don't know, I'm sure, none of them kicked when the monkey dined with Harry Lehr."

Unfortunate for Spoonall. "Want to marry my daughter, do you?" said the financial magnate, wheeling around in his chair.

"Wh-who said so?" gasped the young man. "Are you not young Spoonall?"

"No, sir, my name's Simpson. I've come to bring back a suit of clothes we ironed for you this morning."

"O, I see. Put the bundle on that chair. Good afternoon." The magnate looked at his watch and turned to his desk.

Presently the door opened again. "Well, what is it now?" he asked. "Do you want the pay for ironing those clothes?"

"N-no, sir," said an embarrassed voice behind him. "I'm Mr. Spoonall. I came here according to appoint—" "Five minutes late, young man. Good afternoon."

The Terrible Wretch. "Why, Mabel, dear, what is the matter?" cried the tearful bride's mother. "Tell me all about it. Don't keep back a thing, darling. What has the brute been doing?"

"When I wanted him to lock the windows last night he said there was nothing but me for burglars to—c-carry away, and he wasn't at all afraid. Boo-hoo-hoo!"

Had a Personal Reason. "Is it possible," queried the foreigner, "that women work in cigar factories in this country?"

"Yes; in some of them," answered the native. "Why shouldn't they?" "For this reason, among others," said the foreigner, sadly exhibiting a rusty hairpin he had extracted from a cigar of the "Best in the Universe" brand.

Helping Him. Jack Timmid—Congratulate me! May has accepted.

Cousin Kate—Of course. I told you I'd help you after she refused you the last time.

Jack Timmid—Oh, did you put in a good word for me?

Cousin Kate—Several. I intimated to May that I was after you myself.

Inertia. The City Boarder—Things are monotonous here. I look out across the cornfield and that awful scarecrow is always standing motionless in the same place. If it's not taken away I'll go crazy!

Farmer Foddershucks—That ain't no scarecrow, ma'am. That there's the hired man.—Cleveland Leader.

How Amelia Plays. Afternoon callers at the home of Mrs. Duplisse had just been favored with an organ selection by that lady's young daughter.

"Yes, Amelia play ver' good," said the hostess, in acknowledgment of the company's praise. "Amelia, she never took no lesson, neider; she play entirely wit her ears."—Judge.

He's "it." Rabid Scientist—Do you mean to tell me that you don't believe one iota of my theory of evolution?

Dub-at-Science—Oh, no—not exactly. What I mean to say is that after hearing you talk I've decided that Darwin is 'way off! The link isn't missing at all!—Detroit Free Press.

In a Few Years. The Guest—Waiter, you may bring me a lobster salad.

The Waiter—Yes, sir! with real lobster or lobsterine?—Puck.

BOOKS IN BRITISH MUSEUM.

Students Crowd Its Reading Room and Investigate Various Subjects.

In the reading room of the British museum the desks are crowded with students all day long, and in addition to the books of reference some 20,000 in number, which fill the open shelves of the room, from 3,000 to 4,000 volumes are given out every day. Theology in a wide sense, including the Bible, biblical literature, church history and works on the religious rites and ceremonies of all races and creeds, is easily at the head of the list, with about 300 volumes. Topography comes next, with about twenty fewer, and of these books on London amount to a quarter, books on English topography to another quarter, the other half being for the rest of the world. History and biography come next, English history being mostly in demand, and books on France and the French province second.

Essays, criticisms and miscellaneous literature take the fourth place and are followed by fiction—not less than five years old—moral philosophy, poetry and the fine arts, the drama, law and philology, political economy and so on down to politics, mathematics and chemistry, which have about forty volumes apiece, and lastly works on naval and military subjects, which seldom have more than three or four volumes each. It is a curious list and throws a useful light on the sort of studies taken up by the readers in the museum.—London Globe.

Progress in Steam Turbines. That the actual displacement of the reciprocating steam engine by the steam turbine for many purposes is proceeding at a rapid pace in this country is indicated in the statement that a single company, manufacturing but one of the several types of steam turbines in the United States, took orders within the last half year for turbines for generating electricity having a capacity of 82,000 kilowatts, or nearly 110,000 horse power.

Three of these engines are for a Brooklyn power station and will be the largest ever constructed. It is interesting to note in this connection that wonderful as is the transformation in power mechanism, there are engineers who predict a still more radical change in the not distant future in the development of power from gas engines. This form of engine has been developed to a marked extent in Europe, especially in Germany, and American and English engineers are just beginning to awake to the possibilities in this direction. According to one authority, "we may yet see steam engines and turbines sent to the scrap heap."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Little Bit. "Any news down my way?" repeated the farmer as he stopped his team and bit a chew off his plug. "Wal, I kin give ye a leetle bit, I guess. It hain't earthquakes nor cyclones, but it does purty well for our place."

"Well?" queried the tollgate man. "Wal, the news is that Jim Williams' wife's canary bird got out of the cage the other day, and she had to chase it more'n two hours to get it back."

"That isn't much news." "Nope, I s'pose not; but I was savin' the best for the last."

"And what is it?" "Why, a tin peddler come along and bet Joe Harkins that he could outjump him, and Joe held his breath and jumped seven feet and won the bet; and it's already settled that we are to run him for the Legislature next fall."

Value of Study of Greek. President Hadley of Yale has lately declared that the old school college and university instructors who set great store upon Greek as a means of mental discipline and development were half right and half wrong. They were right, he says, in holding that hard work and precision of thought were more important by far than immediate utility or the student's natural interest in the subject studied. But they were wrong, President Hadley maintains, in supposing that Greek was necessarily more effective than other subjects of study can be made.

Spirit Bridal. She sleeps within a sheltered, marbled close. Amid her quiet kin of yesterday. And all the marvel of her beauty's rose. Has vanished quite away.

Fair 'neath an alien sky his body lies. That was so filled with blood of youth. And all unmarked, unheeded of men's eyes. Where last he fought and died.

Yet who shall say their spirits held not true? In realms invisible of Love's delight. And that their souls, earth freed, clung not and kissed. Beneath the moon to-night!

Jessie Storrs Ferris, in Everybody's Magazine.

Sorrow Of It. "More trouble," sighed McNutty, putting on his coat. "If it ain't one thing it's another."

"What's the matter now?" queried his good wife. "More labor troubles," answered McNutty.

"Not another lockout, I hope," said the partner of his sorrows. "No, it's worse than that," answered the alleged head of the house. "The boss has yielded and I've got to go to work again."—Chicago News.

The Egotistical Lecturer. "Your address upon beauties of the Shinto religion did not seem to interest the audience," remarked one of the committee to the lecturer.

"Yes, I was talking way above their heads," he said pompously. "There must have been some other reason. I was way up in the gallery and it went over my head, even up there."

AGRICULTURE

Roots of Plants. For a long time the roots of plants have been studied, and the longer the study is carried on, the more surprising are the results. All the theories as to how plants should root have been destroyed by the actual facts being brought to light. Thus, it has been assumed that plants that bear pods and are assisted by tubercles on the roots to gather nitrogen from the air would be rather shallow rooters, but would have a large root system. On investigation, we find that this is true in some plants and not true in others. There seems to be as great a divergence of processes of rooting in the leguminosae family as in any others.

Thus the alfalfa plant sends down its roots to an immense depth, sometimes 30 and even 40 feet. The clover root also goes deeply, often 3 and 4 feet, while cow peas and soy beans have very small root systems. The clover will have three times the amount of root that a cow pea of the same volume will have. When corn plants were dug up, all the roots being saved, it was found that they had a surprising volume of roots. Corn has always been considered a surface rooter. It sends out its roots near the surface, and it was known that it sent down other roots as far as the depth of the plowed soil, generally seven or eight inches. But when roots of the corn plant were followed, it was found that they went down as far as four feet, and that they ramified through the soil in all directions.

Poison Hemlock. This has a large number of local names, among which are, spotted parsley, stinkweed, herb bennet, poison root, poison snakeweed, cashes, wode whistle. This plant is purple spotted, hollow stemmed, and grows from two to seven feet high. The small white flowers appear in late summer. The seed is prominently ridged, and has on its inner surface a deep, narrow, longitudinal groove. The fresh leaves have a nauseating taste and send out a mouse-like odor when bruised.

This plant is a native of Europe and Asia, but has become naturalized in the United States and is now common on many of our waysides. It is seen frequently in Michigan, but is not yet often met with in Illinois and Wisconsin.

The poison is the alkaloid conine, and is found chiefly in the seeds when formed, but before that time in the leaves. The root is nearly harmless during March, April and May, but is dangerous afterwards, especially during the first year of its growth.

Domestic animals are frequently killed by eating the plant. It should be destroyed by hand pulling before maturity. This is not a great task, as it is not generally found in large numbers.

Naphthalin and Seeds of Cereals. In many places in the tropics naphthalin is being used to protect the seeds of cereals from injuries by insect enemies. It was questioned if this would not destroy the germinability of the seeds. As high as 3 per cent was sometimes used for this preservation, but it was found that one per cent solution was entirely effective in keeping away insects. Seeds of pearl millet and sorghum were exposed to this chemical for a year. It was found that they were not injured at all by the treatment. Rye was not injured after six months' exposure to it. Barley that was subjected to the chemical gave a higher percentage of germination than when it had not been treated.

Mixed Farming. The surest way to keep up the fertility of the land is to follow mixed farming. This makes a rotation of crops possible. Rotation is not possible where only one crop is raised. The one-crop farm is considered the lazy man's farm, but not all the men that have one-crop farms are lazy men. In mixed farming the owner of the farm has something to keep him busy the year around. He does not have to lose half his time waiting for the time to come when he can look after his crop. The man that follows mixed farming finds it possible to keep up the fertility of his land without great effort.

THE REASON.

Customer—That hair tonic you sold me is a humbug. You guaranteed it to restore hair after everything else failed.

Barber—Well, maybe you didn't try everything else.

A Similar Case. "I contend," said the fat man, "that Wanamaker had a right to dine with Booker Washington."

"Yes?" queried the stranger in that tone of one who was having conversation thrust upon him. "Yes, and Southern newspapers are making too much fuss about it! Why should they kick because Wanamaker dined with Booker Washington?"

"Don't know, I'm sure, none of them kicked when the monkey dined with Harry Lehr."

THE REASON.

She sleeps within a sheltered, marbled close. Amid her quiet kin of yesterday. And all the marvel of her beauty's rose. Has vanished quite away.

Fair 'neath an alien sky his body lies. That was so filled with blood of youth. And all unmarked, unheeded of men's eyes. Where last he fought and died.

Yet who shall say their spirits held not true? In realms invisible of Love's delight. And that their souls, earth freed, clung not and kissed. Beneath the moon to-night!

Sorrow Of It. "More trouble," sighed McNutty, putting on his coat. "If it ain't one thing it's another."

"What's the matter now?" queried his good wife. "More labor troubles," answered McNutty.

"Not another lockout, I hope," said the partner of his sorrows. "No, it's worse than that," answered the alleged head of the house. "The boss has yielded and I've got to go to work again."—Chicago News.

The Fool's Paradise

There was a fool who thought himself a king.
He proudly strutted and his head was high.
Men laughed who heard the poor fool muttering:
"How wonderful am I?"

There was a king whose navy ruled the seas.
But ever as he passed in regal state,
He murmured to himself: "The least of these
In my place could be great."

And would you be a king in purple clad
Yet saddened by your common little-ness?
Lord, let me be the scuffed-at fool and glad
Who cannot know the guess.

THE RIVAL'S LEGACY

BY CHARLES SICAM DENT
(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The river was licking the piles of the old wharf in a caressing sort of way, the sky was black overhead, and occasionally a few big drops of rain fell out of the heavenward murkiness and spattered the planking of the wharf in the glow of a few dim lights that were scattered along its edge. Dent was standing in the glow of one of these lights looking upon the river. He was thinking of a home in the country, of a time five years ago, and of a girl with whom he had had a little misunderstanding. During the estrangement, the girl had married another man and gone away; and Dent had felt a deep loneliness ever since. And to-night, as the roar of the river filled his ears, he was thinking of what might have been.

"Ye look like the man as the woman wants to see, Mister."
Dent felt a tug at the corner of his coat, and looked down. A barefoot child was looking up into his face.
"Do you think so?" asked Dent.
"Yes, I reckon ye are," she said, "there was to a long scar across the man's cheek."

Involuntarily Dent touched the scar with his finger. He had got that from a knife wound while protecting the girl from a ruffian half a dozen years ago.
"An' the woman said your name would be John Dent; an' I reckon now that's it; ain't it, Mister?"
"Where's the woman?" Dent had thrust his hands into his pockets and turned about.
"I was to tell you to follow me, if ye're the man."
"I guess I'm the man, little chap. Lead on."

The child hurried away, and Dent followed closely. Half a dozen blocks up the street, they turned into an alleyway and soon entered a building. At the top of a third flight of stairs the child opened a door.
"Ye're to come in here, Mister; an' she as sent me fer ye is a lyn' on the bed over there."

Dent put his hand upon the child's head gently, then pushed past her toward the bed. But as he approached the woman half-raised herself on the bed and fell cringing and moaning to the farther side.
"She's got off again," said the child. "She was talkin' sense all right when she sent me after ye."
John Dent had stopped and was gazing at the woman on the bed.
"Great Heaven!" he exclaimed under his breath, "an' ye've come to this!"

"I reckon ye know her, then, Mister?" the child said, having caught his words and looking up into his face.
"Yes—that is, I used to. Where do you live, little chap?"
"Across the hall here."
"Well you can run along now—I'll stay here." He placed a coin in the child's hand, and she moved away toward the door.
"I'm glad you're going to stay," she said, "cause it's lots of bother to wait on sick folks."

When the child was gone, Dent went to the bedside. The woman, still cringing against the wall at the back of the bed, stared into his face, but there was no light of recognition in her eyes.
"Kittie," he began, tenderly, "don't ye know me?"
But there was no reply, and only a vacant stare met his eager inquiry.

Dent stood a moment by the bedside, then turned and went out of the room and down stairs, having closed cup of water he again went to the bed. "Kittie, you're to take this medicine," he said, holding a tablet between his fingers.

But the woman only stared. Dent waited a moment; then, setting down the cup of water, he reached over and took the woman in his arms. Then, sitting on the edge of the bed, he held her in his lap and, forcing the tablet between her teeth, after a mixture of force and persuasion, succeeded in getting her to swallow it. Then, placing her upon the bed again he drew the covering carefully about her and sat down near by, still holding one of her small hands which he began stroking tenderly.

Under this rhythmic rubbing and the influence of the narcotic Dent had given, Kittie soon fell asleep and was breathing regularly and even peacefully. For four hours the man sat there at the edge of the bed, rubbing the small, thin hand of the woman, while the rain poured upon the roof, and locked the door behind him. In a few minutes he returned and found the woman still in the cringing position in which he left her. Taking a cup of water he again went to the bed. "Kittie, you're to take this medicine," he said, holding a tablet between his fingers.

Under this rhythmic rubbing and the influence of the narcotic Dent had given, Kittie soon fell asleep and was breathing regularly and even peacefully. For four hours the man sat there at the edge of the bed, rubbing the small, thin hand of the woman, while the rain poured upon the roof,

"Said I could marry ye, if I'd have ye," humming a dismal strain. For awhile he had watched the young but wan face on the pillow grow pale and pink by turns. Then he had made a survey of the room with his eyes.
"D—n!" he muttered. "There's never any telling about how things will come out."
He glanced at the candle, which was now almost exhausted. Then he drew a new one from his ample coat pocket, lighted it and set it beside the expiring one.
"Tallow candles," he grunted, "an' gas goin' to waste in this town."

Another hour passed in silence, except for the rumble of the rain on the roof not ten feet overhead. Then the woman opened her eyes and looked up.
"Is it you, John?" she asked quietly, searching his face with her eyes.
"Yes, Kittie; the child came for me. Did you send?"
"Yes. I remember that I sent. There is a note for you. I was to give it to you sometime. But I got so ill, I knew I should have to get it to you pretty soon."

"Where's Joe?" asked Dent.
Kittie put her hands to her face and shuddered.
"He is dead," she said, "killed in a riot in Daggerty's saloon. It was Joe who left the note for you."
"The dev—"
"Yes. They brought him here; and he made me leave the room, while Daggerty wrote the note for him. It's sealed."

Kittie's thin hand wandered under the pillow and presently came out again with an envelope in it. John took it and broke it open.
"Dear John," he read by the dim candle light, "it's all on account of a lie I told Kittie about you. And now that I've got a big hole in my side, and they say I've got to die, I don't mind telling you straight, so you can come on and marry Kittie if you want to, and make her somehow comfortable—for God knows she has had a rough and tumble time of it since she married me. I've been a devil and treated Kittie like a dog sometimes. But I'm sorry for it now, and it won't do you any good to stamp around on my grave and kick over the head board, if there is any; so I don't mind telling you this, too. Hope you'll take pity on the poor little soul I'm leaving behind. I am yours, Joe Lineman."

"What is it, John?" asked Kittie, when he had finished.
John hesitated a moment. "Said it was all on account of a lie he told ye about me, little one," he answered; "an'—an' said I could marry ye, if ye'd have me. What about it, Kittie, are ye willin' to go back with me five years an' begin where we left off when Joe happened along?" He had caught both of Kittle's hands and was lifting her slowly toward him.

"If I get well, John."
A beautiful wan smile for a moment played about her lips, then she allowed her tired head to drop over upon John's ample breast.

THE EAR OF THE COURT.

Counsel at Last Had Got What He Desired.
Many years ago, when Hugh L. Bond was judge of the United States Circuit Court, and was holding a term of the court in Raleigh, N. C., the late Henry A. Gilliam, afterward judge of the Superior Court of this state, appeared as counsel in some of the cases that were being tried before the Baltimore judge. During these trials the rulings of the court were uniformly against the clients of Judge Gilliam, and frequently Judge Bond would say to Judge Gilliam that there was no merit in his contentions and instruct him to proceed to something else.

After the session of the court had been concluded, Col. John W. Hindsdale, one of the leading lawyers of the court, gave a dinner to Judge Bond, and invited all the Raleigh lawyers who had attended the court.

In the meantime Col. Hindsdale had asked Judge Bond what was his favorite dinner dish and had been told "hog's head and turnip salet."

Judge Bond occupied the head of the table, and noticing the dish of hog's head and turnip salet immediately before him had the waiter present the same to Judge Gilliam with his compliments. The waiter did so, and Judge Gilliam seized the knife and commenced to saw on the hog's ear, remarking at the time "that this was the first time during the week that he had had the ear of the court."—New York Times.

Thought Aunt About Due.
Sir Edward Monson, the veteran English diplomat, who is now visiting America, served under Lord Lyons on Washington under Lincoln's administration, and has many interesting stories of Lincoln to relate.
"A distinguished old woman," he said the other day, "once called on Lincoln and railed and stormed over some fancied wrong that she had suffered at the government's hands."

"Mr. Lincoln listened to her politely, he talked to her in the kindly way he talked to everyone, and then, after she was gone, he turned to me and said:
"Little Edith heard the other day that a neighbor had shot his dog because it had grown old and cross. She studied the matter out awhile and then she looked up in her mother's face and said:
"Mamma, when do you think papa will shoot Aunt Martha?"

Goldwin Smith's Good Work.
A unique figure is that of Goldwin Smith of Toronto, who was 82 years old the other day. He has lived and done public service in the United States, Canada and England, and enjoys a large share of esteem and affection in each country. Many years ago he took front rank as a scholar and thinker. A Toronto paper says of him: "In the country in which for much more than a generation Goldwin Smith has made his home he has borne his full part in the fray of human affairs, sometimes on the winning, sometimes on the losing side, exhibiting always a rare degree of personal force and courage of conviction, but never failing also to manifest the patience, courtesy and dignity that are alone consistent with real eminence of intellect and integrity of heart."

Gorse.
Gleaming in the mountain side,
Gleaming in the valley,
Love blooms gold by palace walls,
Lights the dark town alley,
For this truth is plain and clear,
To deny were treason,
When the gorse is out of bloom,
Kissing's out of season.

Every day they claim its prize,
Light heart, lad and maiden,
Every day in the valley,
With the bright spoil laden,
"Hey!" they sing, and "Ho!" they shout
(This is rhyme and reason),
When the gorse is out of bloom,
Kissing's out of season.

Sharp thorns lurk beneath the flames,
Pain may come to-morrow,
Pluck the burning, love-lit boughs,
'Twill be worth the sorrow,
Love must last throughout the year,
To deny were treason,
When the gorse is out of bloom,
Kissing's out of season.

"The Lady."
They were showing the baby off to a group of Admiring Friends. The poor kid was made to go through his paces like a trained dog.
"How does the chicken go?" prompted mamma.
"Chirp, chirp," said baby, obediently.

"Ah, the little dear," exclaimed the Admiring Group.
"How does doggy go?"
"Bow, wow, wow," placidly replied the Prodigy.
"Oh, you little wizzikin," fussed the Admirers, with true politeness.
"And how does papa go?"
And here a funny look came into baby's eyes, as he straightened up and said, soberly:
"Shut up oor noise!"

The Truth of it.
"Yes," said the first shade in the Elysian fields, "I am Sir Walter Raleigh."
"Really?" exclaimed the new arrival. "Say, tell me, what was the real cause of your trouble with Queen Elizabeth?"
"Well, I'll tell you," said Raleigh; "she wanted me to call her 'Liz' and smoke cigarettes with her and I wouldn't do it, because you know, cigarettes weren't invented then."—Catholic Standard and Times.

LIVE STOCK

The Expert Judge.

At this time of the year, when managers of fairs are looking about them for capable judges of live stock, certain men make bids for appointment as stock jurors and as a rule find such employment at a few fairs and for wages and expenses. Others seek appointment for notoriety and advertising, and find even more work than the men who ask for pay. In both instances the self-advised judges are likely to give poor satisfaction in the judging ring, and if they have been at this sort of work for a few years, it may be expected that they will not always be perfectly impartial in their decisions. At the great state fairs judges are nowadays selected with a great deal of care and discrimination, and in most instances the men selected are real experts, experienced, fair and expeditious in their work. In a few cases the men chosen are not worthy of the confidence placed in them, and they do an injustice to all concerned.

This is most apt to be the case where the judge is picked up at the ring-side, and even more so when, as is too often the case, the manager of the department or ring is not experienced and posted in his work. The real expert rarely seeks appointment, but the work seeks him and he does it well and honestly, more as a duty than as a money-making matter, and in so doing stands the chance of being severely criticised by those whose animals fail to receive the prizes they covet. The work is not pleasant for this reason, and, no matter how honest and capable a judge may be, he will be certain to make enemies. The more expert a man is, however, and the longer he has served in the capacity of an expert judge, the less will his decisions be criticised, or, if they are objected to, it is in a gentlemanly way and without any great amount of friction.

As the expert will be criticised for doing what is most probably right, what will be the case with the non-expert judge who allows himself to be appointed and does the work badly, although honestly? We have heard such men hissed publicly, have seen men withdraw their exhibits, have heard disgraceful talk and much profanity, all as the result of the inexperienced and unfair decisions of the ignorant man who has allowed himself to be appointed judge, knowing full well that he was not entitled to the honor. Of recent years breed associations have had something to say as to the men who should be considered fit to judge the show animals of their favorite breed. This is a good plan. The associations have elected a certain number of their members and submitted their names to the managers of fairs as suitable men to do the judging, and from these lists the managers have largely formed their adjudicating committees. Where such a plan is followed it is impossible for a self-assertive, would-be expert to get a job by cultivating the management or exhibitors. If he is an expert he will so be considered by the association to which he belongs as a member or apart from such membership will be recognized as a competent expert judge of certain breeds of animals, and as such may be set down upon the lists of general associations, and especially so if he is a judge of fat animals or draft breeds of horses.

Knowing that the country is now well stocked with expert judges, there is no longer the slightest excuse for the management of any fair having a non-efficient judge in any department. Where bad judging is done the management is more to be blamed than the man who does the poor work. Exhibitors should also see to it that they will not have to expose their animals to the insults of judges who do not properly understand their work or who know nothing of the breed type of the class of animals they are asked to pass upon. Then, when the right judges have been appointed, the exhibitors should do the fair thing by the judge or committee. To this end the owner of the stock on exhibition should absent himself from the ring while his men in attendance upon the stock should not wear caps or sweaters inscribed with the breeder's name or the name of his farm, etc. The judge should have a clear ring to work in and his work should be untrammelled by spectators or interested persons.—A. S. Alexander, in Farmers Review.

The Cow Owner.
It has been frequently said that we need an improved dairy man more than we need an improved dairy cow. This emphasizes a great truth. The cow owner is the most important factor in the successful dairy. If this man wishes to produce clean products he must himself set the example in his dress and appearance. The farmer that had a sign stuck up in his dairy which read "cleanliness is my hobby" struck the foundation principle of successful dairying.

French Forests.
France is now intent on the preservation of its forests, and the number of men employed by the government to look after the public forests is about 6,000. They can be put to no better service, as the preservation of her forests is of great importance. The mountain tops that have been deforested are being reclothed with trees.

DOG AND MILK JAR.

Combination Raised Much Rumpus in Indiana Town.
A prowling dog stuck his head into a milk jar in the yard of Jerome Sprague last night. The latter left the house in his night clothes to investigate, when the terror-stricken dog bounded forward and brought the jar directly against the man's exposed shins, bowling him over to the ground.

Sprague, who had not as yet discovered the source of the attack, yelled "Murder!" "Fire!" and "Thieves!" so loudly that it awoke his neighbors, who rushed to the rescue.

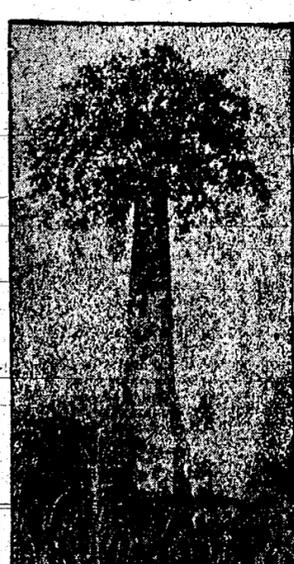

By this time the dog had reached the street, where it ran into a belated farmer's team, causing a runaway in which the man was thrown from the wagon and his shoulder dislocated. A woman with a child in her arms was next run over by the dog and bruised about the head.

The blindfolded animal then turned and re-entered the Sprague premises, again running into Sprague, knocking him down, breaking a finger, and injuring his nose. After overturning a beehive and partly ruining a grape arbor, the dog crashed into the edge of a cement walk and broke the jar. —Morocco, Ind., dispatch.

Saved from Horrible Death.

Miss Maude Stevens of Jamaica, N. Y., was saved from a horrible death the other day, by a stranger, who declined to give his name. She was gathering wild grapes, when her foot slipped and she sank up to her neck in soft, oozy mud, that threatened to overwhelm her. Her cries were heard by a young man driving by in a buggy, who rescued her. Between Jamaica and Flushing there is a dense growth of ferns and vines above a deep morass. There are grapevines there, and many people visit the place yearly to gather the fruit, which is said to make better preserves than cultivated grapes.

Strange Bouquet.

The tree has grown from the inside of a chimney. The photograph was taken at Pachim, Siam.

Great Lawyer's Shrewdness.

Daniel O'Connell once unraveled a queer plot in a will case. Witness after witness swore that they saw the document duly executed. At last a constantly reiterated expression seized the lawyer's attention, "The life was in him," over and over repeated. "By the virtue of your oath, was he alive?" he asked one witness. "By the virtue of my oath, the life was in him," he was answered. Then O'Connell turned to the man and very slowly and very solemnly said: "Now I call upon you, in the presence of your Maker, who will some day pass sentence upon you for this evidence—I solemnly ask you—and you answer at your peril—was not there a live fly in the dead man's mouth when his hand was placed upon the will?" Cornered and pale with fear, the witness confessed that this had actually happened.

Lightning Art Work.

On the breast of one of the two brothers killed in New York by lightning while bathing was imprinted a likeness of a tree. It was about eight inches long and was perfect even to the smallest details, including the coloring of the leaves. The likeness was burned deep in the flesh. Physicians are unable to explain this phenomenon, as there was no tree within several hundred feet of the spot where the lightning bolt struck. The ways of lightning have long been past finding out.—Boston Globe.

Unique Call Bell.

Prof. W. A. Kissicks has received a unique call bell from Porto Rico. It is in the form of a turtle, the back of which is real turtle shell. By pressing the tail or head a bell will ring until the pressure is released. It is the invention of a Porto Rican young man, who received his education in Brooklyn.—Brooklyn Eagle.

FRUITFUL FURNACES

INTENSE HEAT PRODUCES PRECIOUS STONES.

Scientists Have Succeeded in Plucking Real Diamonds and Rubies from the Crucible of the Furnace.

Recent advices from France state that Prof. Moissan, the eminent scientist and inventor, has actually succeeded in making genuine diamonds and rubies. He employs for this purpose the electric furnace, which has been so improved that a degree of heat can be produced, approaching the extreme temperatures, which were undoubtedly a factor in the formation of minerals and gems in the interior of the earth.

The rubies obtained are of large size, weighing 10 or 15 carats, and in quality and color equal and even surpass those found in the earth. The natural forces attending the formation of diamonds seem to have been more complicated, and so far the diamonds resulting from the efforts of the scientists have been very small, but still they are positively identified as the carbon crystal—the diamond. They are remarkably clear and bright, and on a small scale as fine specimens as nature's own product.

The electric furnace has enriched chemistry with a whole series of new compounds. Probably the one of most value to mankind at large is Calcium Carbide. The simple application of water to Calcium Carbide generates the gas Acetylene, which is now being commonly used for lighting.

The peculiar merits of Acetylene light are its brilliancy and high candle power, ease of installation, economy and its adaptability for lighting buildings of every description, regardless of their location.

CROCODILES HARD TO KILL.

Many Bullets Necessary to Put End to One's Existence.

Shooting crocodiles in India is a little like shooting mud turtles. A hunter describes the sport: "We suddenly came on our first crocodile about a mile from camp, asleep on the bank, with its mouth open, not more than twenty yards from us. It started to get away, but I fired two shots as quickly as I could get them off, the first into its open mouth and the second into its neck as it turned its head. That stopped it effectually and it never got into the water. The next day we found another crocodile and my friend got it just above the shoulder. That was not enough to stop it, but we both fired as it was getting into the water and one bullet hit it in front of the quarters. They sometimes come up again when wounded, so we waited about twenty minutes, and then looking about I saw it lying on its back at the bottom of the stream. It looked dead enough, so we got hold of the end of the tail and pulled it ashore. We gave it two more shots, one in the neck and the other in the middle of the back, and it then still had vitality enough to bite a paddle in two, though the legs were paralyzed and it could not move."

Pigeons Mate for Life.

Monogomists always, pigeons have given centuries of proof of their absolute fidelity to their marriage vows. The task of the breeder and trainer has been facilitated by the fact that pigeon matings were for life. It has been found that pigeons in captivity, even in the artificial atmosphere of one loft occupied by gay newcomers of all varieties, when once they have been married can be relied upon to stay together unless forcibly separated, and then return if ever set at liberty. Some birds have even cooed their silver wedding song, as there are substantiated cases of pigeons who have lived together for twenty-five years.

His Biting Sarcasm.

"My nephew, Horace, who recently graduated from the village academy, comin' out with a whole lot more hair and considerable less horse sense than he took in with him," said the old coozer, with even more than his usual acidity, "announces that he will marry the girl of his choice despite all opposition. If the audience will kindly remain seated we will now have the pleasure of hearing from the young lady."—Puck.

When Leading Camels.

When a number of camels travel they are usually led by a strong bull, who keeps the rest in order. If the leader should fall ill, or be absent from any other cause, the herd almost invariably mutinies. In Asia Minor the duty of leading camel caravans is frequently deputed to donkeys. This may sound curious, but it must be remembered that in the east the donkey is an important animal.

Plan to Study Birds.

For the purpose of studying the habits of birds of passage a "vogelwarte" has been established at Rosalitten, in eastern Prussia, where birds are to be caught and liberated again after small rings have been attached to their feet. The directors request that the feet of such ringed birds killed anywhere be sent to them.

A Quaint Saying.

One day an elderly teacher was questioning Dorothy as to her knowledge. As Dorothy was only 4, the questions asked were rather deep. The teacher was satisfied, however, when on asking Dorothy what a dream was, the child replied, "Dreams are pictures the angels show us when we are asleep."

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our many thanks for the expressions of kindness shown to us in our hour of sorrow by our friends and neighbors. The helping hands, the words of sympathy and the beautiful flowers.

MR. and MRS. ANTHONY KENNY and family.

The Admiral and the Dog.

The late General H. V. Boynton disliked dogs, says the Cincinnati Enquirer. He said one day in Washington:

"I know a lady who always receives her callers with a yapping, snapping spaniel, pampered and spoiled, on the sofa beside her. An old admiral, a friend of mine, visited her one afternoon, and the spaniel took a dislike to him. It began to bark and growl and show its teeth, and it leaped down from its velvet cushion on the sofa and began to make little feints and springs at the admiral's legs.

"He as he talked held his cane in his hand and kept the tail of his eye on the infernal little beast. Its growls and yappings redoubled, and its feintlike springs at his legs increased. For anxiety and rage he could hardly follow the thread of the talk. He took a firm grip on his cane.

"The lady said calmly: 'Don't be afraid, admiral. My little dog never bites any one.'

"And even as she spoke the nasty brute nipped the admiral's ankle, tearing the stocking and drawing blood.

"He swung his cane and gave the dog a rap on the skull that rolled it half unconscious into a corner.

"Don't you be afraid either, madam," he said. "I never strike little dogs."

Colonel Bradshaw's Money.

Colonel Blythe while in Topeka told a good poker story. A northerner got into a game with some southern gentlemen in Alabama. When it came time to quit he was way to the good. Colonel Bradshaw, one of the southern gentlemen in the game, owed him $300 and gave his check for the amount. The northerner was at the bank bright and early the next morning and presented the check. The cashier looked at it, jammed it down on the book, went to the vault and got a stack of bills, came back, counted out $2,000, counted it over again to make sure and then shoved it through the window. The northerner was delighted. He gathered it up, went over to a desk and started to count it. As soon as he looked at the first bill he stopped with a jerk and exclaimed to the banker:

"You have made a mistake."

"How so?" asked the cashier.

"Why, this is Confederate money," said the northerner.

"That's the only kind Colonel Bradshaw has had in the bank since the war," replied the banker.—New York World.

CHOICE MISCELLANY

Cuckoo's Eggs.

Mr. Hart of Christchurch, Hampshire, who has made a lifelong study of British birds, has in his fascinating collection a large number of cuckoo's eggs, each in the nest and with the clutch in which they were deposited, and in almost every case the intruder's egg is an exact imitation of the rightful eggs, only a size larger. Mr. Hart is convinced that the female cuckoo inspects the eggs in the nest she has chosen before laying her own egg and that her retinal impression affects the coloration of the egg. From instance the cuckoo chose the nest of a small bird, the name of which I have forgotten, whose nest was a closely woven ball with a tiny hole for entrance. In this case the alien egg was pure white, the cuckoo being unable to see into the bottom of the nest and her mind on the subject being therefore a blank. The plumage of the adult cuckoo is very much like that of hawks, while the young are indefinitely speckled and blurred, the supposed reason being that no small bird would dare to feed what it took to be a young hawk in its nest. So the cuckoo has still another charge of mean duplicity against it in addition to the familiar ones.—London Outlook.

Wealth of an Indian Rajah.

It is believed that Saraji Koo, the rajah of Baroda, is the possessor of wealth equal if not superior to that of John D. Rockefeller. He was educated in an English university, and his people are well governed. Much of his vast riches is in the form of precious stones. His wife owns the most famous diamond necklace in the world. It is made up of 200 stones, each the size of a hazelnut. She also has a collar of 500 perfect diamonds, none less than twenty carats. In the treasure chamber is a carpet four square yards in surface made up entirely of ropes of diamonds, pearls and rubies. It required $4,000,000 worth of gems and three years of labor. The long corridors of the palace are lined with marbles and onyx of incalculable value. The palace is steam heated, and electric elevators are placed at frequent intervals. Bronzes, paintings, statuary, all imported and worth many millions of dollars, are scattered throughout the royal dwelling.

Fashionable Linen Colors.

Linen holds its own, especially in the long coat suits, which are practical and becoming. The plaited skirts are popular and pretty, but the circular skirt with rows of very narrow stitched bands around the bottom is growing in favor on account of its greater durability. The favorite color is of course white, but gray, blue, pink, mauve, green and the natural color are seen in good models. Most of the separate coats are in plain tailored styles, with colored velvet collars.

East Jordan and its surrounding territory is steadily improving, and has been since the first settler arrived. The last five years mark an unusual change for the better and we have no excuse to "hide our light under a bushel." Publicity marks the success in most legitimate private enterprises, and is one of the chief keys to the booming of a town. Our opportunities are far superior to most towns of our size and if we all get a hold and "push" and not allow anyone to pull back we can more than double our showing during the next five years—"our town is what we make it." Let's begin a new effort next Wednesday night by electing officers to our Board of Trade who are willing to work hard, and let them feel that we are all back of them pushing in the same direction.

A fishing boat with four families of Indians, including several women and children, left Charlevoix Sept. 26 for Beaver Island. The boat has not yet reached the island and it has about been given up as lost. The boat was owned and sailed by Jack Thomas, a well known and steady Garden Island farmer and fisherman. There are supposed to have been about 20 Indians in the boat, probably half women and children. The Garden Island Indians have small farms, but work in the woods getting out cedar for St. James' shippers, and also do some fishing. Thomas came over to sell the boat and took the people for a last pleasure ride to the main land, all intending to return by steamer. Failing to sell the boat they started back in the sailboat. The Garden Island Indians are with few exceptions steady and industrious and are by reason of their isolation pure blooded Ottawas and Chippewas, whose ancestors lived on the islands a hundred years or more ago.

Next Wednesday night at 8 o'clock standard time, the Board of Trade meets at the Village Hose House to elect officers and consider important business. All who have ever been members of this organization and all those who desire to "hurry" improvements are earnestly wanted.

"The Heart of Chicago" Lincoln J. Carter's spectacular comedy drama will play an engagement at the Loveland Opera House on next Monday night—the Anniversary of the great Chicago Fire. Throughout the five stirring acts of the play the whole game of human passion and virtue is run through. John Ames, the villain, has some exceptionally smooth tricks to accomplish to further his designing ends, he affects the ruin of his partner, makes love to his partner's wife, finally kills him and kidnaps the only child of the marriage; brings up the girl, in her tender years playing the father to her, as she blossoms into womanhood, abandoning that role for the one of the lover, in which he is destined to be as unsuccessful in her case as in her mother's. Ames is assisted in his villainies by an old employee named "Bradley," who falls into evil ways more out of weakness than predisposition. Mc Kadden, a garrulous, vulgar, but big hearted Irishman, who graduates from the gutter to the aldermanic degree, is instrument of Nemesis in Ames' career. The suicide of Ames in the fifth act leaves the road open to as favorable a conclusion as one can associate to a man of his nature.

An excellent cast is presenting the piece this season and several good specialties are introduced. Seats now selling.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Kenny was made sad by the call of the angel (Death) who bore away one of the twin boys who so recently had come to make their life happy for them. Little Francis died Oct. 3rd, aged six months and one week. He suffered but a few hours and went to join the numberless throng above. He may not return, but to him thou shalt go.

When thy days are numbered and finished below; And it may be thy child be given First to meet and to welcome his parents in heaven; And there reunited to part never more One song shall ye sing and one Saviour adore.

Committed Suicide.

Mrs. Lee Fells took the Morphine Route.

Above woman, in company with another and two young fellows drove over from Boyne Falls Wednesday. They visited several saloons and while in one, Mrs. Fells stepped into an adjoining room and took a powder and on coming back to the party threw the remaining contents of the box on one of the men. The affair was considered a joke and forgotten until some time later when she collapsed. She was taken to Dr. Dicken's office where the Doctor found that she had taken an over dose of morphine. Dr. Sweet was called in but in spite of their efforts the woman died. Coroner Sweet impanelled a jury—consisting of Messrs. W. F. Empey, LeRoy Sherman, Earl Crossman, Joseph Etcher, George Spencer and Henry Sholes. At the inquest Thursday afternoon the jury decided that Mrs. Fells had come to her death by an overdose of morphine, taken with suicidal intent. One of the witnesses swore that she was with her in the southern part of the state and that on two different occasions she had taken laudanum with suicidal motives when under the influence of liquor.

Mrs. Lee Fells had charge of a resort at Boyne Falls and her object here was as procurer. Her maiden name was Etta Bourden and her age 26 years. Her husband, with whom she was not living, resides in Petoskey. Her mother and sister live in Milwaukee.

PAINFUL PERIODS

AMERICAN WOMEN FIND RELIEF

The Case of Miss Irene Crosby Is One of Thousands of Cures Made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many women realize that menstruation is the balance wheel of a woman's life, and while no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering, it is not the plan of nature that women should suffer so severely.

Miss Irene Crosby

Thousands of American women, however, have found relief from all monthly suffering by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it is the most thorough female regulator known to medical science. It cures the condition which causes so much discomfort and robs menstruation of its virtues.

Miss Irene Crosby, of 313 Charlton Street, East Savannah, Ga., writes: "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a true friend to woman. It has been of great benefit to me, curing me of irregular and painful menstruation when everything else had failed, and I gladly recommend it to other suffering women."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, backache, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhoea, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that "bearing-down" feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for further free advice. Thousands have been cured by so doing.

No married woman is ever so happy as she thinks her husband thinks she is.

A pretty girl is one who is handsome and doesn't know it.

Sailors Have Sport Racing Turtles

Start Big Snappers Across Deck and Bet on Their Finish—Gambler Thinks Track Should Be Built for Them.

"I have heard of horse races, bicycle races, foot races, dog races, and a dozen different kinds of races, but never before in my long life have I heard of a turtle race," mused Lem Fugle, the sage, philosopher and guide of the battery, yesterday afternoon, as he hung his feet over the stern of the tugboat E. S. Booth, and puffed nonchalantly at the pipe of peace.

"Yes," he continued, "that is the story brought in by the steamship Queen Eleanor from Samarang and Achen. A friend of mine, who is a stoker on the Queen, told me they had a regular Saratoga during the trip over. The sailors bet their money and when that was lost staked their dunnage on races between a score of big snapping turtles, which were brought over by the men simply to have a little sport with."

"On the second day out the sailors dug out a half dozen of the monster snappers and pasted numbers on their backs. Strong ropes were tied around the necks of the turtles, the bets were placed, and the snappers sailed away from the post in a manner much similar to the way the horses leave the scratch line at a race track.

"The after dock of the steamer was made a race track. There was a real bookmaker, and several dollars of real money changed hands. The heavy losers wailed and declared No. 3 or No. 6 was a dead one, and could not get around the track unless it was carried."

Lem Fugle refilled his pipe and looked wistfully at the entries in tomorrow's races, carefully picking out the winners, and assuring the reporter what a "clinch" Mad Mullah would be "for show."

"I have gambled on every kind of race that has ever been run, with the exception of the turtle race," spoke the sage in a sorrowful tone, "and I think it is up to the sports of New York to build a track for racing the crust covered creatures. You can put me down on the list as a charter member of the Metropolitan Turtle Racing association," said Mr. Fugle, and the tugboat E. S. Booth left her mooring at Pier No. 4, East river, and started down the bay for a tow.—New York American.

Charles Wesley's Seven Thousand Hymns

Founder of Church Indefatigable in His Sacred Writings—Commenced at the Age of Twenty-nine.

Wonder is always expressed and doubts arise when the statement is made that the Rev. Charles Wesley, a clergyman of the Church of England, actually wrote seven thousand hymns during his lifetime. This statement is verified by the publication over his own signature of thirty-nine books of poetry, sacred and secular. It is doubtful if there exists a hymn book adopted by any religious denomination which does not contain several of his sacred songs.

Thomas Moore wrote very few sacred songs, but of these few one stands out pre-eminent and will be sung till time be no more by the people of this whole earth—"This song, that always reaches the heart, is 'Come, Ye Disconsolate,' found in almost every hymn book and never accredited to the author.

The Rev. Charles Wesley must have been writing hymns all his life, and it is recorded of him that he wrote on horseback while traveling from place to place upon his duties in the church. In those days, graphite pencils and flowing pens were unknown, and he wrote with a piece of soft lead he always carried with him on any old scrap of paper. He lived to be 80 years of age, and was born in 1708.

The hymns of Dr. Watts come next in number to those of Charles Wesley, namely, 697, but they mostly appealed to children, although never forgotten in later years.

The fact is that Wesley commenced writing his sacred hymns at the age of 29.

The Methodist hymn book in this country, as well as the Wesleyan hymn book in England, being so replete with the hymns of Charles Wesley is accounted for by the fact that both Charles and his brother John were clergymen of the Church of England, but John, taking exception to some part of the ritual of that church, went out to preach to the multitudes, and after he had organized what his followers called the Wesleyan church his brother Charles joined him and wrote the hymns, to which were added the favorite hymns of other sacred writers.

Was Down on Circumstantial Evidence

Man Arrested for Complicity in Bank Robbery Had Reasons for His Belief—Unfortunate in Love Affairs.

"As to circumstantial evidences, it's a queer thing," said the man in the brown suit. "Five or six years ago I was in a certain town for a night when a bank was robbed. Next morning I was arrested as an accomplice, it being contended that I was seen idling in front of the bank and evidently acting as sentinel to those within. Three different persons identified me as the man, and a fourth claimed to have seen me enter the hotel at a late hour by way of a shed and a window. I was looked up for examination, and with a chance of things going hard with me, when evidence began to come forward on my side.

"The landlord asserted and swore that I was sitting in the office at 10 o'clock p. m. Two servants swore they saw me going to my room half an hour later. A man having rooms opposite the hotel swore that he saw me smoking at my window at midnight. A guest of the hotel who had a room next to mine swore that my snores disturbed him from midnight till 2 o'clock and that he heard me turn over in bed at 3, and so I was honorably discharged from custody."

"But about it being queer?" was asked.

"Why, all the people on both sides were mistaken. I was not outside the bank at the times named and neither was I in the hotel."

"But you were somewhere?"

"Oh, of course. Fact is, I got mashed on the landlord's daughter and we sat up all night in a balcony and talked love and looked at the moonlight. Yes, sir, sat there all night like a couple of idiots, and though I declared I would die for her and she said she only wanted me and a humble cottage, she was married to a red-haired butcher within a year and I was being sued by a snub-nosed widow for breach of promise. I was simply observing, you know, that circumstantial evidence is a queer thing and I wish to add that a jurymen shouldn't be influenced too much by it."—Tit-Bits.

Bereaved Husband Needed the Tiger

His Wife Had Recently Died and He Was Seeking Congenial Society—English Newspaper Responsible for Story.

At a sale of animals from a hippodrome a tiger was being offered. The highest bid was made by a man who was a stranger, and to him it was knocked down. The owner of the animal, who had been eyeing the stranger uneasily during the bidding, then went up to him and said:

"Pardon me for asking the question, but will you tell me where you are from?"

"From the country," responded the man.

"Are you connected with any show?"

"No."

"And are you buying this animal for yourself?"

"Yes."

The showman shifted about for a few moments, looking alternately at the man and the tiger, evidently trying his best to reconcile the two.

"Now, young man," he finally said, "you need not take this animal unless you want to, for there are those here who will take it off your hands."

"I don't want to sell," was the quiet reply.

"What on earth are you going to do with such an ugly beast if you have no show of your own and are not buying for someone who is a showman?"

"Well, I'll tell you," said the purchaser. "My wife died about three weeks ago. We had lived together for ten years, and—and I miss her."

He paused to wipe his eyes and steady his voice, and then added:

"So I've bought the tiger."

"I understand you," said the great showman in a husky voice, as he turned to hide his emotion.—London Tit-Bits.

Life's Sorrows That Quickly Pass

"You with Your Chains That Are Riveted Fast, Remember Tomorrow, This Day Will Be Part of the Past."

I.

By to-morrow this day will be part of the past.

By to-morrow the ache you are thinking must last.

As long as with a blow and white rivulets run.

As long as the world may be warmed by the sun—

By to-morrow the ache that is deep in your heart.

May be gladly forgot, or recalled as the smart.

Of a wound that was trifling, and, looking ahead.

You may gaze on fair prospects all fair—

With the loveliest flowers that ever may blow.

Though to-day, the gray future seems barren and dead.

II.

The past, lying there with its joys and its woes.

With its wine bottle drained and its poor, withered rose.

With his pledges all broken, its hopes that were vain.

Its moments of gladness, its aensons of pain—

The past has not torments it cannot return.

'Tis only gray ashes that never may burn.

And you with your chains that are riveted fast.

Where the staples of circumstance bulge from the wall.

Be glad—oh, be glad—for, though heaven should fall.

By to-morrow this day will be part of the past.

—E. E. Kiser.

CRAFTY MAN WINS OUT.

Neat Way in Which He Dupes the "Angel of His Life."

Mr. Smuthe reaches home for dinner and finds his wife in an unusually taciturn mood.

They go through the meal almost quietly; the only speech being from him.

The evening progresses in the same fashion.

At last he asks:

"Aren't you feeling well to-night?"

"Oh, yes," she tells him, coldly.

"Then what is wrong with you?"

"You ought to know."

"How should I know? Have I said or done anything to offend you?"

"No; you haven't said anything of done anything."

"Then what on earth makes you act this way?"

"I suppose you have forgotten what day this is?"

"No. This is the 25th day of August, 1906."

"And it is my birthday, and you forgot that it was, and you never forgot it before, and you—"

"One moment, my dear. I did not forget that it was your birthday."

She smiles through her tears, thinking of diamond sunbursts and things like that.

"Oh, you dear thing!" she exclaims.

"You did not forget it, then?"

"No. What birthday is it?"

"Why, my thirtieth, of course."

"Well, angel of my life, do you not think it is more gracious of me to seem to overlook your birthday than to remind you of how old you are growing?"

Next day she tells the neighbor that dear John is the thoughtfulest man that ever lived.

Young Fool and the Old.

There's no fool like a young fool
When fireworks are concerned.
Behold them all the victims small.
With hands and faces burned,
Behold the lame and blind and maimed,
Their needless sufferings:
There's no fool like the Old Fool
Who gives a child such things.

There's no fool like a young fool
In glorious July.
To fire a bomb and lose a thumb
And tear away an eye.
To touch a light to dynamite
And scatter death and noise:
There's no fool like the Old Fool
Who gives a child such toys.

There's no fool like a young fool
To make the Fourth a crime.
When every nurse and every hearse
Is working overtime,
When East and West and North and South,
The lists appalling grow:
There's no fool like the Old Fool
Who thinks a child should know.

There's no fool like the young fool
Who smells the powder smoke,
But the awful may that mars the Day
Has ceased to be a joke.
Yet Satan tempts the Old Fool
To chatter "nuth and nuth."
And put among the heedless young
The instruments of death. —Life.

Forcing the Youthful Mind.

There is very general cry that children are becoming every day less childlike, that they are being pressed far beyond their strength. Of course, the fanatics tell us that it is not so, that all this outcry is the outcome of misplaced sentiment and of ignorance of the true inwardness of educational methods. But this we know, that forced minds are very like forced plants—curiosities, perhaps, but not such as the experienced cultivator keeps as "stock." Nature is very jealous for her nurslings. You may fool considerably with adult specimens, even to the degree of making them hideous; you may experiment almost indefinitely with this, and the other kind of pruning, grafting, but let a cold wave or a hot wave but once blow upon your tender nurslings and they are gone without hope of resurrection.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Mere Matter of Size.

She was corpulent and on her way to Chicago from New York, and was traveling with her two children, aged respectively 3 and 4 years. As far as Buffalo she had not been asked to pay for the children, but at that point the train crew changed and the new conductor, a gruff, surly-looking individual, looked askance at the children and asked for their tickets.

"Why, I have none," said the mother.

"How old are they?" snapped the man in blue.

"The girl is 3 and the boy 4, sir."

"They look pretty big for that," was the gruff rejoinder.

"Well," said she of the avoidpouls, "if you're collecting fares according to size, you'd better get another ticket for me."

Needless to say, she did not pay for the children.

Plain Spoken.

"I hope, senator," ventured the up-tight citizen, "that you never allowed anyone to hint about a bribe in your presence."

"I should say not," replied Senator Boodie, with much emphasis.

"Ah, I am so glad to hear it."

"No, sir, I never allowed them to hint because it took up too much time. If they wanted anything crooked done here had to say it right out and then I'd listen."

GOOD WORK OF SCIENTISTS.

Immense Sums Saved Through Bureau of Entomology.

Great sums are saved for the agriculturists of this country by the efforts of the government bureau of entomology toward the extermination of insect pests. The cotton worm before it was studied and the method of controlling it by the use of arsenicals was made common knowledge, levied in bad years a tax of $30,000,000 on the cotton crop. The prevention of less from the Hessian fly, due to the knowledge of proper seasons for planting wheat, and other direct and cultural methods, results in the saving of wheat to the farm value of from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 annually. Careful statistics show that the damage from the codling moth to the apple is limited two-thirds by the adoption of control, representing a saving of from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 in the value. The rotation of corn with oats or other crops saves the corn crop from the attacks of the root worm to the extent of perhaps $100,000,000 annually in the chief corn-producing regions of the Mississippi valley. The cultural system of controlling the boll weevil saves the farmers of Texas many millions of dollars.

Cure to Stay Cured.

Wapello, Iowa, Sept. 11th (Special)—One of the most remarkable cures ever recorded in Louisa County is that of Mrs. Minnie Hart of this place. Mrs. Hart was in bed for eight months and when she was able to sit up she was all drawn up on one side and could not walk across the room. Dadd's Kidney Pills cured her. Speaking of her cure, Mrs. Hart says:

"Yes, Dadd's Kidney Pills, cured me after I was in bed for eight months and I know the cure was complete for that was three years ago and I have not been down since. In four weeks from the time I started taking them I was able to make my garden. Nobody can know how thankful I am to be cured or how much I feel I owe to Dadd's Kidney Pills."

This case again points out how much the general health depends on the kidneys. Cure the kidneys with Dadd's Kidney Pills and nine-tenths of the suffering the human family is heir to, will disappear.

England's "Military Canal."

It is not generally known that England has a "military canal," started just a century ago as part of the scheme of defense propounded by Mr. Pitt, in view of a possible invasion by the French under Napoleon. The canal was to have been thirty-six miles in length, running from Rye to Hythe, the idea being that it would serve as the means of conveying stores and also act as an obstacle to the enemy's advance, once he landed. Now, 100 years after its inception money is proposed to be voted for putting it in a state of repair.

Costly Illegibility.

Sir Walter Scott's writing was at times—not often—decidedly obscure. Taking advantage of this a cunning rascal by some means obtained possession of a note of unquestionable illegibility written by the great novelist, and presented it to Sir Walter's tailor as an order for a couple of suits of clothes. The tradesman, recognizing his patron's signature, took the rest for granted and executed the commission, only to find, on asking for payment, that the note was an answer to an invitation to dinner.

Jonah's Boots Found in a Whale.

It is said that the late Clerk Joseph Willard once told Edward D. Sohler, the eminent lawyer, that he had read in a paper that a dead whale was driven ashore at Nantucket, and that on opening him a pair of boots were found marked "J."

Mr. Sohler instantly replied: "They probably belonged to Jonah, and he must have left them when he stepped out."

STRONGER THAN MEAT.

A Judge's Opinion of Grape-Nuts.

A gentleman who has acquired a judicial turn of mind from experience on the bench out in the Sunflower State, writes a carefully considered opinion as to the value of Grape-Nuts as food. He says:

"For the past 5 years Grape-Nuts has been a prominent feature in our bill of fare.

"The crisp food with the delicious, nutty flavor has become an indispensable necessity in my family's everyday life.

"It has proved to be most healthful and beneficial, and has enabled us to practically abolish pastry and pies from our table, for the children prefer Grape-Nuts and do not crave rich and unwholesome food.

"Grape-Nuts keeps us all in perfect physical condition—as a preventive of disease it is beyond value. I have been particularly impressed by the beneficial effects of Grape-Nuts when used by ladies who are troubled with face blemishes, skin eruptions, etc. It clears up the complexion wonderfully.

"As to its nutritive qualities, my experience is that one small dish of Grape-Nuts is superior to a pound of meat for breakfast, which is an important consideration for anyone. It satisfies the appetite and strengthens the power of resisting fatigue, while its use involves none of the disagreeable consequences that sometimes follow a meat breakfast." DISFIGURED BY ECZEMA.

Wonderful Change in a Night—in a Month Face Was Clear as Ever—Another Cure by Cuticura.

"I had eczema on the face for five months, during which time I was in the care of physicians. My face was so disfigured I could not go out, and it was going from bad to worse. A friend recommended Cuticura. The first night after I washed my face with Cuticura Soap, and used Cuticura Ointment and Resolvent, it changed wonderfully. From that day I was able to go out, and in a month the treatment had removed all scales and scabs, and my face was as clear as ever. (Signed) T. J. Soth, 317 Stagg Street, Brooklyn, N. Y."

NOISES IN HER HEAD

Mrs. Reagan was a Nervous Wreck, But Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Brought Sound Health.

"Before I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills," said Mrs. Mary Reagan, of No. 86 Kilburn street, Fall River, Mass., recently; "I was in and out of bed all the time, but now I stay up all day and do all my own work."

"I was badly run down from overwork. One day noises began in my head and almost made me crazy. My head felt as if a tight band had been put around it, and the pressure and the sounds made me so uneasy that I often had to walk the floor all night."

"My stomach was in bad shape, and I had smothering sensations. At such times my body seemed bloodless, my hands were like chalk and my face turned yellow. The doctor said I had dyspepsia in the worst form. Then my nerves gave way and I was completely prostrated. I frequently suffered from smothering sensations."

"The first box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that I used quieted my nerves so that I could get a good night's sleep, which was a new experience for me. Before I began to use them I was a nervous wreck and trembled at the slightest sound. I was so weak that I had to sit down and rest every few steps when I went up stairs. Now I can run up a whole flight at once. The smothering sensations have gone and the noises in my head have stopped entirely. My appearance has greatly improved, my friends who were alarmed of my account before, now say: 'How well you are looking!' My husband spent over a hundred dollars on treatment for me that was worthless, but a few boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills brought me sound health."

Eating "Humble Pie." There is a queer twist of language in the phrase "to eat humble pie." The word "humble" is a corrupted form of the original "humble," which is an inedible part of the carcass of a deer and would make very poor pie. The words "humble pie" have the same original meaning as "to eat crow," a phrase common in political life. There is an enforced humility in this process and the change from "nimble" to "humble" introduced a thought which harmonized with the idea sought to be expressed. The last form of the phrase has entirely supplanted the original.

The CONVICT COUNTRY: or FIGHTING for a MILLION

BY CHARLES MORRIS BUTLER Author of "The Revenge of Pierre," "A Tameless Tragedy," "Ants," Etc. Copyright 1905, by Charles Morris Butler.

CHAPTER XX.

Lang Condemned to Fight a Duel. After a few short hours of rest, Wilson and Lang arose refreshed. With Pearl's help—the twain managed to scrouge up sufficient food, easily prepared, which answered for breakfast. With the intention of giving no visible excuse to Schiller for further punishment, and realizing that promptness in reporting for duty was essential if they expected leniency, they hunted Rogers up and gave themselves in charge.

Rogers conducted Lang and Wilson to a cabin built in the side of the mountain, situated in the north corner of the village. This was the entrance to the shaft leading into the heart of the mountain. The mines were practically only a tunnel about 200 yards long by 30 feet wide and 10 feet high at its highest point, boarded up roughly, to keep the earth from crumbling in and filling the space. Over a hundred men worked in this place. Some of these prisoners had never seen the light of day since their incarceration.

"I suppose, Lang," said Rogers, calling Louis to one side, out of hearing of everybody but Wilson, "that you are prepared for the worst in this deal?"

"No, I can't say as I am," said Louis, smiling, "but I can take it as it comes. There is a great deal in feeling that you don't deserve punishment, and you know that I do not—and I can make myself contented under the circumstances. I brought it on myself ignorantly, but if everything goes on as it should I will be the winner in the end. I am used to hard labor, and as work is all one to me I don't care what I have to do. I think the wife I've gained—the finest little woman in the town is worth the struggle. See?"

"Yes I see and I don't see! I think I can understand as well as anyone."

A villainous personage was placing his rough hand over her mouth.

You expect to make it warm for Schiller in some way though."

"That remains to be seen. It would be foolish for me to give my plans away at this stage in the game."

"I know Wilson pretty well, and can guess his plans for revenge. However, you might have done worse than fall into my hands for safe keeping. I'll treat you fair; but I want to give you a little advice—whatever you do, do it well."

"There are two meanings to this," said Lang to himself.

"I shall make Wilson overseer of the cartmen, not such a hardened rascal like yourself. I can trust him to come and go between the mines and the river," Louis understood the drift.

"And you, Lang, I shall have to give a pick and shovel and send you into labor with the diggers—lifers. We do not restrict even these to absolute silence, so you can talk all you want to; but I advise you not to make a confident of any of my guards—a word to the wise. You know, of course, from overhearing my conversation with Golden, that I bear Schiller no love, but that is no reason why I should be any too lenient with you! Your experience must come from having hard knocks, and your salvation must come through your own self."

"At this juncture Cronoley, Rogers' assistant, entered the office.

"Give an ignorant man authority and he will abuse it," such was the case of Cronoley. He was a great, burly, grizzled Irishman, of the typical kind. At one time he had been a sewer cleaner in one of our large cities. He had killed a companion in a fit of anger and made his escape through the subterranean passages which he knew so well. He fell in with a band of thieves later, and in turn fell in with the convicts under Schiller. The king had appointed him to the position he now held, and it is safe to assume that he was the kind to take advantage of his power.

Cronoley conducted the twain to their respective working stations. It only took Lang about 10 minutes to divine Rogers' true thoughts in assigning him to work with the "diggers"—in the main, life prisoners, and for that reason a most desperate lot of prisoners, whatever they had been sentenced for. The reason, then, was apparent to Lang. Here was the place to stir up the insurrection! Lang set ostensibly he was attempting to carry her from the room. "It took Lang but a second to knock the fellow down and catch his wife in his own arms before she fell to the floor. When the party, headed by Schiller, arrived upon the scene, Lang was master of the situation.

"Who brought you here?" Louis asked of Pearl. Between sobs Pearl managed to tell her story. "Early this morning father came here to notify Schiller that he was ready to practice—he never came back. I waited and waited for his return; at last unable to bear the suspense, I came to find him. Schiller would not tell me where he was, and against my will he forced me to remain here. He confined me in a darkened room and has dared to ask me to become his wife, again!"

"This was too much for Louis. "You cur!" he cried, and sprang upon Schiller, bearing him to the floor in his frenzy.

Louis, in taking this means of redress, had simply robbed himself of any legal right to impose punishment—and at the same time laid himself open to the law. Before Golden or Rogers could interfere, the guardsman who, livid with chagrin and passion, had gained his feet, hurled himself upon our hero, striking him upon the head with the butt end of his revolver. Schiller rose to his feet, smiling. "I have the advantage here," he said, "and I will have his life for that blow!"

"Schiller," said Golden, and he was terribly in earnest, "you are a greater scoundrel than I supposed. From this time on you and I are enemies! You condemn Lang to death for this, and so help me, I'll make it more than warm for you!"

"I do not fear your threats, Golden, I am king here, and this is my palace. This man—a convict—has assaulted me, and as my right, I sentence him to fight a duel to the death with Whalen in the amphitheater to-morrow night! We will see who has the upper hand here!"

"So be it," said Golden, furiously, and there was a look of resolve in his face, "and in the meantime I will take his wife under my care."

Rogers was rather taken back at the unexpected turn of affairs. "Schiller, where is Dr. Huntington?" he asked.

"At the hospital," was the dogged reply of Schiller, who now desired to cultivate Rogers as a witness to the assault.

"For how long?" demanded Golden. "Forever!" retorted the king. "If Dr. Huntington has consented to do his duty, you have no right to further punish him."

"That will do, gentlemen," said the revengeful man. "That is my business. The people have granted me the privilege of being revenged on him, and I refuse to be balked by you!"

"Then I will appeal to the people to take away your arbitrary power!" said Golden. "Rogers and I, as two of the supreme councilmen, must pit ourselves against you!"

"Do so! You dare to interfere with me, and see what I will do with you!" "Set the ball to rolling," was Golden's retort. "Your downfall will be on your own head!"

Without more ado the party left the house. Golden took Pearl into his charge. Rogers placed Lang under arrest, taking Louis to his own home. Wilson alone slept in the haunted house.

In the evening, sure enough, upon the public bulletin-boards, appeared this notice: "NOTICE! Be it known by all men, that whereas Louis Lang being duly convicted of assault with intent to kill the person of the king, he is hereby sentenced to fight a duel to the death with one Whalen, convicted of bigamy, at the amphitheater, on Wednesday night, July 10. By order of "SCHILLER, King."

(To be continued.) LOTS OF ANIMALS FAINT. Cats Particularly Are Subject to Attacks When Excited.

When the little white kitten tumbled down on the rug with a piteous "meow" the woman, who always knows what to do, picked her up and called for the camphor bottle. "She has fainted, poor little thing," said the woman. "Camphor will bring her to."

And the other boarders laughed, but the woman continued to administer the aromatic spirits in her own motherly fashion. When the white kitten had revived the woman sought corroboration of her diagnosis from the veterinary surgeon next door. "Of course, the cat fainted," he said. "Lots of animals faint. Cats are especially apt to keel over in moments of excitement. These attacks are sometimes confused with fits, but they are really fainting spells, and the patient can be brought to with camphor. Dogs faint, too, and horses. A horse that faints is usually thought to have blind staggers or sunstroke, but anybody knowing the animal's constitution can tell the difference and apply the special treatment required."—New York Post.

ABOUNDING LIFE

The Healthful Life; the Battle Creek Idea A NEW BOOKLET ABSOLUTELY FREE

BY THE TIME this Publication reaches its readers the first sheets of a new booklet on Healthful Living will be off the press. This booklet cost thousands of dollars to prepare. The facts it sets forth are the result of thirty years of experiment, analysis, research. The ideas of the leading dieticians of the world are summarized in it. It would be hard to compute its value in dollars and cents, but it will be mailed without charge to any reader who asks for it.

We hope to send a copy into every home in America. It ought to be read by every man who desires to have physical strength, to do his full share in the world's work. Every woman who wishes to perform her whole duty to herself and family, should not only read it, but carefully, thoughtfully study it.

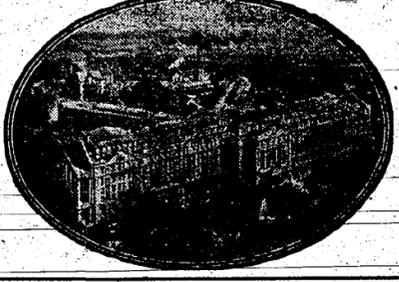

There is nothing pedantic in the booklet—no exploitation of fads or fancies—just plain straightforward talk and practical truths. It tells of a rational life you can live in your own home, whereby you can secure abounding, abiding health. It tells the cause of sickness and weakness. It shows the part that diet plays in making or marring careers. Every word you can understand. And back of every word is authority. For this booklet is a condensed summary of the wonderful achievements in restoring and preserving health during thirty years of dietetic study at Battle Creek.

And, remember, this booklet is not to exploit the Battle Creek Sanitarium. The message is a message for the home—for everyday life. You can follow its teachings without interference with business or home duties.

There is absolutely no charge—no obligations on your part if you ask for the booklet—now, or in the future. So write today—now. Only those who act will know the value of this opportunity. If we could convey a clear conception of its purpose you would need no urging. Let the booklet speak for itself. Mention this publication and send your request either by letter or postal card addressed to the Advertisement for Constipation. Deal With the Honest Druggist. When you ask your druggist for Mull's Grape Tonic, a cure for Constipation, Stomach and Bowel Trouble, and he tries to sell you something else which he claims is just as good, that is substitution or dishonesty. It is an insult to your intelligence. He does it for profit, and not because he cares about your health. No honest druggist will do it. Stop a moment and reflect before you permit him to mislead you. He is willing to endanger your life and health for the sake of a few pennies. Is he a safe man to trade with? Deal with the Honest Druggist who will promptly supply you with what you know you want, and that which you call for. Until Mull's Grape Tonic was put on the American market there was no cure for Constipation and Stomach trouble. Your Doctor will tell you as much. He knows that a physic won't cure Constipation. Some remedies may act as laxatives and physics, but you and I know from experience that physics are dangerous, that they weaken, that they not only fail to cure but make us worse until finally they lose effect entirely, which means paralysis of the Bowels and death by Typhoid Fever, Appendicitis, Stomach, Heart, and Lung Trouble, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Kidney and Bright's Disease, etc. There are honorable druggists in most every locality, men who will promptly supply you with Mull's Grape Tonic and not try to sell you something else; but should there be no such druggist there, we will send you the Tonic direct from this factory without additional expense to you. If you have Constipation and want to try Mull's Grape Tonic and have never used it, we will send you, or any of your friends who suffer with this affliction, a free bottle. Send us name and address at once, while we are giving the first bottle free; we want to prove to you, at our expense, the truth of the claims we make for this valuable remedy. Use the coupon below at once while we are giving the remedy away. Free to all who have never used it.

Convulsion, Fits, then Epilepsy.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine has been so successful in curing these brain-wrecking diseases that there is every reason to believe that even the most hopeless cases can be benefited, if not fully restored. We will be pleased to refer any one thus afflicted to many who now enjoy the blessing of health, after years of hopeless suffering.

"I have a son that had brain fever when two years old, followed by fits of the worst type, and he was pronounced incurable. I spent hundreds of dollars for him, without result. After about fifteen years he became so bad that we sent him to Longhill hospital for the insane, at Logansport, Ind. He was there nearly three years, but he continued to grow worse, so we brought him home July 30, 1903, in an awful condition. He had lost his mind almost entirely. He hardly knew one of the family, could not even find his bed, was a total wreck. He had from 5 to 10 fits a day. We were urged to try Dr. Miles' Nervine, and before the first bottle was used, we could see a change for the better. We have given it to him ever since, and he has had but two very light spells since last August, 1903, and then he was not well other ways. We pronounce him cured, as he can work and go anywhere. If any one wishes to ask any questions concerning this, they are at liberty to do so."

WOMAN AND FASHION

Handsome Blouse.
How many times during a season occasions crop up when a wardrobe seems absolutely inadequate and each separate frock fails to fill our demands. A watty extra waist will often save the day, and the accompanying illustration shows a stylish model. A deep yoke facing, broad sailor collar and attractive sleeve are striking features. White linen, trimmed with narrow red sou-

WAIST WITH SAILOR COLLAR.
tache braid and finished with a dashing tie of red silk, will make a stunning blouse after this pattern. Blue linen with decorations in white or tan with brown are also good combinations. French flannel or any of the light woolen materials may be used for this waist.

Packing Dress Skirts.
No crease is permissible in the front panels of dress skirts—or petticoats either, for that matter. In packing skirts never fold through the middle of the front breadth. Professional packers leave the front of the skirt uncreased except for a necessary cross-wise fold and fold the skirt around it. If this portion goes without creases or wrinkles they declare the rest is pretty sure to come out all right. Soft paper and plenty of it is a necessity for gowns. All folds excepting those actually pressed in with the intention should be separated by layers of paper.

Novelties in Sweaters.
A sweater bolero is something new, collarless, ending just above the waist line and not fastening down the front. It is made with loose bell shaped elbow sleeves. Another novelty is the ordinary blouse form, ending at the waist, which has a square neck, standing collar and cuffs, knitted of contrasting color.

Silks Fashionable.
Silk has not gone out of fashion because of the advent of hot weather. Taffetas and fancy silks, not to speak of foulards and other utility silks, are immensely popular. Gowns for elaborate occasions are made of the charming pompalour silks, which are so beautiful that they never stay out of fashion very long.

Outdoor Negligee.
In this age of the practical, when the dressing sacks or negligees are no longer limited to the confines of one's boudoir or bedroom, dainty designs for these graceful necessities are planned with as great care and thought as any other garment in a woman's wardrobe. There has always been a certain charm about these fascinating little negligees which appeals to both men and women, for they carry with them an air of comfort which is distinctly agreeable and satisfying. As they often have to be slipped on hurriedly

DRESSING SACK.
those that are simple in construction are often the most desirable. The model here shown is all that could be desired. Made in one piece, it requires only a few minutes' time to fashion a dainty garment. The trimming may be of bands or of contrasting material. It requires only one and one-ninth yards of forty inch material, so that almost every woman would be able to have a few dressing sacks from pieces left over from other garments. Made of silk or lightweight cloth it becomes a wrap that may be worn on the street and is quite enough protection from cold for some time to come.

PROBATE ORDER.—State of Michigan, the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.
A. Attestation of the Probate Court for said County, held at the Probate office in said County on Monday the 25th day of September in the year one thousand nine hundred and five.
Present, John M. Harris, Judge of Probate in the Matter of the Estate of Fred E. Winters, deceased.
Peter K. Winters, Administrator of said estate comes into Court and represents that he is now prepared to render his final account as such Administrator.
The court is ordered, that Monday the 30th day of October next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the examining and allowing such account and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be held in the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix and show cause, if any there be, why the said account should not be allowed. And it is further ordered, that said administrator give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the holding of said Court, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the CHARLEVOIX COUNTY HERALD, a newspaper published and circulated in said county three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.
JOHN M. HARRIS,
Judge of Probate.

CHANCERY ORDER.—State of Michigan, Thirteenth Judicial Circuit, in Chancery. Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix, in Chancery, at the City of Charlevoix, on the 11th day of September, A. D. 1905.
Carl F. Myers, complainant vs. Lillie May Myers, defendant.
In this matter it appearing that the defendant Lillie May Myers is not a resident of this state but is at the present time a resident of the Province of Ontario, Canada, therefore, on motion of Knowles & Converse, solicitors for complainant, it is ordered that the defendant do enter an appearance in said cause on or before four months from the date of this order, and that within twenty days the complainant cause this order to be published in the CHARLEVOIX COUNTY HERALD, a weekly newspaper published and circulated in said county, said publication to be continued once in each week for six consecutive weeks.

DRIFTING TOWARDS BRIGHT'S DISEASE
Many people who are neglecting symptoms of kidney trouble, hoping "it will wear away," are drifting towards Bright's Disease, which is kidney trouble in one of its worst forms.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE
stops irregularities, strengthens the urinary organs and builds up the worn-out tissues of the kidneys so they will perform their functions properly. Healthy kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood as it passes through them. Diseased kidneys do not, and the poisonous waste matter is carried by the circulation to every part of the body, causing dizziness, backache, stomach trouble, sluggish liver, irregular heart action, etc.
If you have any signs of Kidney or Bladder Trouble commence taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once, as it will cure a slight disorder in a few days and prevent a fatal malady. It is pleasant to take and benefits the whole system.

How to Find Out.
You can easily determine if your kidneys are out of order by setting aside for 24 hours a bottle of the urine passed upon arising. If upon examination it is cloudy or milky or has a brick-dust sediment or small particles float about in it, your kidneys are diseased, and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE should be taken at once.

G. B. Burhans Testifies After Four Years.
G. B. Burhans of Carlisle Center, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I wrote you stating that I had been entirely cured of a severe kidney trouble by taking less than two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure. It entirely stopped the brick-dust sediment and pain and symptoms of kidney disease disappeared. I am glad to say that I have never had a return of any of those symptoms during the four years that have elapsed, and I am evidently cured to my cure, and heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Cure to any one suffering from kidney or bladder trouble."

If you have transgressed against the laws of nature, you must suffer. Youthful ignorance, later excesses and nervous diseases have wrecked thousands of promising lives. Treat with scientific physicians and be cured. Avoid quacks. E. A. Sidney, of Toledo, says: "At an early age I was the victim of youthful complaints. I treated with a dozen doctors, who all promised to cure me. They got my money and I still had the disease. I had given up hope when a friend advised me to consult Drs. K. & K., who had cured him. Without any confidence I called on them, and Dr. Kennedy agreed to cure me or no pay. After taking the New Method Treatment for six weeks I felt like a new man. The weakness ceased, wormy veins disappeared, nerves grew stronger, hair stopped falling out, urine became clear and my physical system vitalized. I was entirely cured by Dr. Kennedy and recommend him from the bottom of my heart."
