Second Annual

Republican Club Banquet a Successful Affair

Over two hundred enthusiastic republicans of Charlevoix County assisted by friends of Antrim and Emmet Counties met at the Baker's Inn at Charlevoix, Tuesday night and proceeded to have one jollification. The East Jordan Military Band headed the South Arm crowd who went down on the Steamer Hum and upon arrival there our band favored the public with a number of selections.

A short business meeting of the Club was held in the parlors of the Inn prior to the Banquet. The meeting was called to order by Pres. McMillan. Secretary Robbins gave a short report of the first meeting. The Committee on By-Laws who have been appointed for nearly two years reported that they had failed, as yet, to draft suitable laws and they were given another year at it. In the election of officers the following gentlemen were chosen:

President, R. A. Emery, Charlevoix
Secretary, R. H. Taylor, Boyne City
Treasurer, Dr. Coukfin, Boyne Falls.

On motion, the officers were empowered to appoint a vice president for each township and ward in the county and all necessary committees.

At the Banquet, Pres. McMillan called the assemblage to order and Rev. H. A. Putman of Charlevoix offered invocation. The menu was all that could be desired from consomme to cigars. The management of Baker's Inn are to be congratulated on their efforts to please. The room was tastefully decorated with autumn leaves, and the service was excellent. Prior to and throughout the banquet Davidson's Orchestra rendered delightful selections which were heartily enjoyed by the guests.

Hon. W. J. Pierson of Boyne Falls, our state representative, acted as toastmaster. After calling the assemblage to order and singing "America", the toastmaster introduced Hon. F. W. Knox who spoke on "Great Wrongs to be Righted."

Among other things he took up the matter of taxation and the proposed workman's compensation law. The balance of the program was taken up by impromptu speeches by a number of gentlemen from this and our sister counties. Dr. A. M. Wilkinson favored with a baritone solo, and a male quartette sang a couple of pleasing selections.

The assemblage adjourned about 2:00 A. M. and a tired but happy bunch of enthusiastic republicans wended their way home, the East Jordan contingent getting home at four o'clock.

Government inspectors have estimated a loss of revenue amounting to not less than $50,000 per year through the illicit manufacture of brandy and other intoxicating liquor in Chicago. This statement, which comes direct from Washington and which was recently published in the Chicago Daily News may or may not be new and surprising to the liquor interests, but it disposes of their persistent claims that prohibition is related to moonshining. The Washington correspondent through whom this statement is made says that the government revenue agents have recently discovered illicit brandy and whisky stills in Massachusetts, in Brooklyn and in Chicago. And in every case these stills were doing business within a comparatively few yards of scores of open saloons and thriving breweries. Moonshining is as naturally related to the liquor business, to the saloon and the brewery and to their defiance and violation of the law as the saloons and the breweries are related to poverty and misery and disease. Moonshining in Massachusetts and in New York and the loss not less than $50,000 a year through the illicit manufacturing of liquor in Chicago will prevent the further assumption that such criminal activities had any possible direct or indirect relation to prohibition or local option or the closing of saloons.

BUSINESS HONESTY.

The time was not so long ago when men differentiated between honesty in private life and honesty in business.

But the wave of modern merchandising which swept out "obvious trickery" has washed away false standards and made "Business Honesty" a living force. Nowadays all good stores are honest all the way through—honest in merchandise, price and service.

Whatever success has been this store's portion has resulted from an unwritten policy of "Business Honesty." We have tried to make it a store where even a child could purchase with safety.

Of course we make mistakes, sometimes we err in our judgment of merchandise, but we stand in back of our goods and when things go wrong we are always ready to make them right.

WOMEN TAKE TO THE WATER

In Swimming, It Has Been Found, They Prove Stronger Than the Sterner Sex.

Swimming is the one outdoor exercise in which woman frequently excels man. The water is her heritage, but only in the last decade has she taken possession, says the New York Evening World.

By virtue of physical perfection and stamina Annette Kellerman, the lithe Australian girl who essayed the English channel, is perhaps the header of these. Other noteworthy figures are Elaine Golding, the powerfully built Bath beach champion; Eleanor Sears, the Newport society girl; Elsie Thiel, winner of many sprints; Adeline Trapp, a Brooklyn teacher who has conquered Hell Gate; Ethel, Vera and Beatrice Duce of Fort Hamilton, who have swum the Narrows and done still more difficult feats; Evelyn Howell, the Flushing school girl; Augusta Galtup and Clara Hurst, survivors in a race from Brooklyn bridge to Coney Island.

Why, other things being equal, do women swim better than men? Because their conformation is well adapted for this exercise. Because there is usually more adipose tissue under the skin, and this protects the body from invading cold.

Origin of the Club.

Not infrequently women of wit direct their shafts against the clubs so beloved and frequented by mankind. In Ralph Nevill's story of "London Clubs" and their origin and uses are some examples of wit aimed in the opposite direction.

The original conception of a London club was a retreat to which West End men might betake themselves, certain that the troubles and worries of the outside world would not follow them into a building which they regarded as a temple of dignified seclusion and repose.

Perhaps the best description of a club, as it existed in former days, was that given by a witty bishop, who defined it as a place "where women ceased from troubling and the weary were at rest."

Another amusing definition was once given by George Augustus Sala. "A club," said Sala, "is a weapon used by savages to keep the white woman at a distance."—Youth's Companion.

History Repeated.

It was at the Circus Maximus. The Emperor Nero leaned forward, in spite of his embonpoint, and touched one of the emperor's ladies waiting on the shoulder.

"Pardon me, Agrippina," he said, in excellent Latin, "but would you mind taking down your coiffure, so that I can get a look-in on the arena? There's a massacre today that I'm particularly anxious to see."

Her only answer was a sneer of patient scorn. Well she knew that Nero had come in on a press ticket, while an easy Roman suitor had paid real money for her seat.

A New Point of View.

A youngster had been very rude to his mother, and she had turned him over to his father to be disciplined, when the following conversation was overheard:

"Ted, did you say so and so to your mother?"

"Yes, dad."

"Well, you will have to settle that matter with her, because she is your mother and not mine. But she is my wife, and I will not allow any man, young or old, to be rude to her. Now you must apologize to me for being rude to my wife, and then you can settle with your mother for being rude to her."

Preparing for the Part.

The terrible storm had passed, and the angry waves, after engulfing many a gallant craft, had subsided. The captain of the partially disabled steamship, as land hoove in sight, hung a crutch over the starboard bow.

"Merely a bit of stage business," he explained; "all the papers will say tomorrow morning that the great ocean liner came tumbling into port."

Took Him In Earnest.

A negro bricklayer in Macon, Ga., was lying down during the noon hour, sleeping in the hot sun. The clock struck one, the time to pick up his hod again. He rose, stretched, and grumbled: "I wish I wuz dead. 'Tain' nothin' but wuk, wuk frum mawnin' till night."

Another negro, a story above, heard the complaint and dropped a brick on the grumbler's head.

Dazed, he looked up and said: "De Lawd can stan' no jokes. He jes' takes ev'rythin' in yearnist."

Modern Woman

There Ought to be Only Equality of Sexes

By MARY R. COLE

HERE is such a delightful balance between the endowments of men and women, the two sexes are so eternally interdependent, that there should be no disadvantage in belonging to either half of humanity. But when we consider our civilization we are tempted to believe that Nature planned us for some Age of Gold, which suddenly turned to base alloy on her hands. Looking along the pageant of the centuries, we see that in cruder times women's disadvantage was a question of muscle, and today women are still handicapped, in spite of great all-round advances, because their imperfectly trained minds and bodies still conspire with convention to perpetuate conditions induced by the reign of brute force.

The savage woman found it a sad disadvantage to have to grind all the corn and bear all the burdens. The more civilized woman saw that her untrained labor was but a sorry means of providing for those dependent upon her. The women of today appreciate the disadvantage of offering her skill in a market where of two standards for the same work the lower is her allotted portion. The modern woman would rescue her city from corruption, foster the juvenile court, aid the teachers by providing a pension system; but she finds her sex a crushing disadvantage in a society which approved of her helping to pay for the government, but disapproves of her helping to elect its officers.

A woman is at a disadvantage in private life also. But whenever the sexes have come together in the simple family relation the power which makes the world go round has always neutralized some of the artificial distinctions of society. Away from the competitive struggle individuality has a chance. The greatest power of concentration guides the family fortunes, whether its possessor be man or woman. But though character wins out at last, it always costs the woman more to make her power felt.

The historical attitude of formulated Christianity toward our sex commands women to be obedient to their husbands, harking back to the dictum of the aristocratic Apostle to the Gentiles. And dogmatists still follow Paul's rushlight, preferring his narrow conception of a submissive woman, to Jesus' broader vision, which saw no distinctions of sex or rank in the great family of humanity.

Today we accept as a convention that men should be uncovered and women covered in churches and assemblies, at teas, funerals and the like. We think of it, if at all, as an odd survival, like the obsolete buttons on the back of a man's coat. But when an English rector actually closes his church to prevent its "desecration" through the visits of women in the glory of their own hair we realize that Paul's ghost still walks and tries to blast the wights that cross it. Every disadvantage which the modern woman finds in her home and her outside work is a survival of the old brute force idea, supported by the theological tradition of a superior and an inferior sex.

Train the Reason of the Modern Child

By JOHN A. HOWLAND

To train the reason rather than the memory is the plan of Julian Chase Smallwood, who insists that during his education the modern schoolboy is like a keg with a funnel in its bung-hole to receive the liquid poured into it. He is in a passively receptive state, taking no active part in the proceedings except that he supports the funnel. He is made to remember facts. When he has passed his examination more facts are poured in, largely displacing the old facts.

Mr. Smallwood wishes the student to think independently and develop or create habits of mental investigation and analysis. There is lack of consideration of the ability to reason, and there is a tendency to treat men's minds as a machine for carving wood treats the rough produce fed to it without regard to grain or texture.

Students in every course should be classed according to their abilities and the quality of their minds, and each class or squad taught separately.

There should never be required a demonstration of a theorem or repetition of text. But the process of thought by which such demonstration is made should be rigidly exacted.

When a formula is to be deduced the student should never be required to repeat the deduction, but to give the process involved.

The student should have free use of text books in examination and should be asked questions that appeal to his intelligence, not to his memory.

If he has no judgment he cannot answer with a cartoon of books at his elbow.

If he has not knowledge time forbids his acquiring it during examination and also answering the question with satisfaction.

Keep Cool and Usually Win Their Point

By W. R. HATHAWAY

The reason that men of the Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford order "get by" with their dubious schemes, is their ability to keep their temper in the face of great provocation. Most men, when denounced as thieves and bunco-steerers, get into a rage and are ready to fight, but not so with the disciples of the Wallingford school. They will simply smile and gently assure the man who is denouncing them that he is wholly in the wrong and bless me if they don't usually succeed in making him sorry he has uttered such injurious language.

Not long since I had an experience with one of this type. I knew positively that he had done me out of many dollars and I pitched into him with the most vigorous English at my command.

Had he resented my talk I guess there would have been trouble, but he didn't, and at length I grew weary of conducting a one-sided fight.

When my verbal assault was over this Wallingford began to show me how entirely wrong I was from start to finish and one would have thought I had been blackening the fair fame of an angel.

What's more, he stuck by me till he had made me eat an expensive dinner as his guest, although I was morally sure he was paying for it with coin taken from me or some other innocent of my kind.

Helen of Troy Head-Dress

Photograph by Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

A FAMOUS Parisian coiffeur artist is the author of this head adornment, which, by the way, will be worn by several of the beauties in a forthcoming American production. The band is of green velvet with a long, dull gold fringe. It is very effective where the wearer is possessed of classic features. According to fashion reports, it will be very popular this winter, though not suitable to all.

FOR SMALL GIRL.

This pretty dress is made up in Shantung in a light shade of blue. The full bodice has a little square yoke embroidered with shades of brown, green or blue silk, the waist-band and cuffs being embroidered to match.

The full gathered skirt has two tucks made above the hem; it is sewn to the same band as bodice, and both fasten at back.

Material required. Three yards thirty-four inches wide.

Effective Dress.

A simple but effective dress worn recently by a young girl is a broad striped blue and white cotton, made with a tunic bound with blue, a narrow belt embroidered with currant tinted chenille, a full bodice, pretty well hidden by an old-fashioned embroidered white muslin collar, covering the shoulders, and made in front with platted ends of the same embroidered muslin, the white hat having an upstanding crown, white and blue tulips set up against it.

Blue foulards with large lozenge spots find a great deal of favor for girls at garden parties, made with the deep sailor collar of the same, bound with soft blue silk.

Matting Rugs.

When purchasing matting get several yards extra, with which to make summer rugs. You can cut this extra piece into desired lengths and finish them neatly on the edges by pulling out the straws to the depth of several inches and tying up the threads.

These rugs protect the floor covering quite as well as heavier ones and have the advantage of being without fuzz and easily cleaned.

Motor Bonnets.

New motor bonnets are made up entirely of wide and narrow platted trills. These are put on a thin gauze foundation which is stiffened with wire. The trills are often made of black and white ribbon and held in place around the middle of the bonnet by a two-inch band of black velvet. Green is a favorite color for summer and stone gray has proved a serviceable one.

RIBBONS MAY BE WASHED

And, as Most Mothers Will Agree, There is Considerable Economy in the Plan.

When there are several schoolgirl daughters in the family the expenditure on hair-ribbons becomes quite a considerable item. Fastidious mothers who declare that ribbons never look well when washed should try the following method:

Make a mixture of three ounces of soft soap, three tablespoonful of honey, to a teaspoonful of gin and water.

The ribbon is placed on a board and scrubbed with the mixture. It is then rinsed by dipping several times in clean, cold water, and not squeezed out, but hung over a line to drip, then put between cloths and ironed by drawing the ribbons from under the iron. This prevents creasing and a stringy appearance at finish. The iron should be kept still with pressure upon it.

White ribbons will not turn yellow when washed if the water is warm instead of hot, and the soap used a fine white quality. Rinse in three waters, the last being a strong blue.

Hang in the sun until half dry, then press under clean muslin with a warm iron.

GOOD TO LEAVE HAIR ALONE

Rarely Does It Pay to Seek to Improve on What Nature Has Ordained.

After all, I would advise no one to change the color of the hair, though it be as black as Erebus. Nature gives each face the framework most suitable to it. She never needs correction on that point.

Why not dress the hair to suit the face, no matter what is the prevailing fashion?

Hair should be allowed to grow gray naturally. All dyes destroy the beauty and color of the hair. Let us gracefully accept the snowy locks of age. They harmonize with the face which has been changed by time and sorrow. Many faces are softened and beautified by white hair. It is more graceful and dignified not to attempt to repair the ravages of time.—Exchange.

Street Dresses Featured.

Dresses of blue serge can practically be considered staple merchandise, as they are usually in good demand for general wear, says the Drygoods Economist. This season they will be especially favored and are being featured with bright-colored trimmings and white. The blue and white combination has been particularly popular in Paris, and manufacturers who have several models showing the white or blue and white trimmings anticipate they will take well with the trade, judging from the orders already placed.

The Frill Jabot.

One of the latest novelties from Paris is the frill jabot of platted muslin, in which a platted piece of material about twelve inches long is caught together in the center with a strip of muslin and pinned at the front of the lace collar, forming a semi-circle or spreading fan-shaped jabot. Another new jabot which is very similar has the lower edges graduated by being cut obliquely. This is made of marquisette with insertions and edgings of valenciennes or cluny lace between which a hint of color is introduced.

GREAT TRUTH IN EPIGRAM

Few Words of the Late Edwin A. Abbey Contain a Whole Sermon to Misers.

"The late Edwin A. Abbey, the American painter who lived in London, was only comfortably off, whereas he might have been rich."

The speaker, a Chicago art dealer, had just returned from Europe. He continued: "I dined one evening with Abbey in his house in Chelsea, and after dinner we walked in the blue twilight on the Chelsea embankment."

"As we passed Old Swan House and Clock House, and the other superb residences that front the river, I reproached Abbey for his extravagance."

"Why," I said, pointing toward Clock House, "if you had saved your money, you might be living in a palace like that today."

"But Abbey, with a laugh, rather got the better of me. He rattled off this epigram—and it's an epigram I'll always remember when I'm tempted to be parsimonious:

"Some folks," he said, "are so busy putting something by for a rainy day that they get little or no good out of pleasant weather."

CONTAGIOUS.

Gayboze—When my wife saw the condition I was in when I got home from the club last night it just staggered her! Martini—I'm not surprised. You know you drank enough for two, old man!

Qualified Prayer.

Marion's mother was ill, and the aunt who took her place at the head of the household plied the children with unaccustomed and sometimes disliked articles of diet. One day, after being compelled to eat onions, Marion refused to say grace.

"Then you must sit at the table until you are ready to say it!" was the aunt's stern judgment. An hour or so later, when the brilliant sunshine and impatient calls of her comrades together comprised an irresistible appeal, Marion capitulated—thus:

"Oh, Lord, make me thankful for having had to eat horrid old onions, if you can do it. But I know you can't."

A Matter of Creed.

"Two men were disputing over their respective churches," says the Slater News in reviving an old story which is still good. "One was a Baptist and the other a Presbyterian. Finally one of them called a neighbor who was passing and asked his opinion as to which was the better church in which to be saved. 'Well, neighbor,' he said, 'son and I have been hauling wheat for nearly forty years. There are two roads that lead to the mill. One is the valley road and the other leads over the hill, and never yet has the miller asked me which road I came, but he always asks, 'Is the wheat good?'"—Kansas City Times.

A HIT

What She Gained by Trying Again.

A failure at first makes us esteem final success. A family in Minnesota that now enjoys Postum would never have known how good it is if the mother had been discouraged by the failure of her first attempt to prepare it. Her son tells the story:

"We had never used Postum till last spring when father brought home a package one evening just to try it. We had heard from our neighbors, and in fact every one who used it, how well they liked it.

"Well, the next morning mother brewed it about five minutes, just as she had been in the habit of doing with coffee without paying special attention to the directions printed on the package. It looked weak and didn't have a very promising color, but nevertheless father raised his cup with an air of expectancy. It certainly did give him a great surprise, but I'm afraid it wasn't a very pleasant one, for he put down his cup with a look of disgust.

"Mother wasn't discouraged though, and next morning gave it another trial, letting it stand on the stove till boiling began and then letting it boil for fifteen or twenty minutes, and this time we were all so pleased with it that we have used it ever since.

"Father was a confirmed dyspeptic and a cup of coffee was to him like poison. So he never drinks it any more, but drinks Postum regularly. He isn't troubled with dyspepsia now and is actually growing fat, and I'm sure Postum is the cause of it. All the children are allowed to drink it and they are perfect pictures of health." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

SERIAL STORY

The Courtship of Miles Standish

With Illustrations by Howard Chandler Christy

The Lover's Errand

So the strong will prevailed, and Alden went on his errand, Out of the street of the village, and into the paths of the forest. Into the tranquil woods, where bluebirds and robins were building towns in the populous trees, with hanging gardens of verdure, peaceful, aerial cities of joy and affection and freedom. All around him was calm, but within him commotion and conflict, Love contending with friendship, and self with each generous impulse. To and fro in his breast his thoughts were heaving and dashing, As in a foundering ship, with every roll of the vessel, Washes the bitter sea, the merciless surge of the ocean! "Must I relinquish it all," he cried with a wild lamentation, "Must I relinquish it all, the joy, the hope, the illusion? Was it for this I have loved, and waited, and worshipped in silence? Was it for this I have followed the flying feet and the shadow Over the wintry sea, to the desolate shores of New England? Truly the heart is deceitful, and out of its depths of corruption Rise, like an exhalation, the misty phantoms of passion; Angels of light they seem, but are only delusions of Satan. All is clear to me now; I feel it distinctly! This is the hand of the Lord; it is laid upon me in anger, For I have followed too much the heart's desires and devices, Worshipping Ashtoreth blindly, and impious idols of Baal. This is the cross I must bear; the sin and the swift retribution." So through the Plymouth woods John Alden went on his errand; Crossing the brook at the ford, where it brawled over pebble and shallow, Gathering still, as he went, the May-flowers blooming around him, Fragrant, filling the air with a strange and wonderful sweetness, Children lost in the woods and covered with leaves in their slumber. "Puritan flowers," he said, "and the type of Puritan maidens, Modest and simple and sweet, the very type of Priscilla! So I will take them to her; to Priscilla the May-flower of Plymouth, Modest and simple and sweet, as a parting gift will I take them; Breathing their silent farewells, as they fade and wither and perish, Soon to be thrown away, as is the heart of the giver." So through the Plymouth woods John Alden went on his errand; Came to an open space, and saw the disk of the ocean, Sallies, somber and cold with the comfortless breath of the east wind; Saw the new-built house, and people at work in a meadow; Heard, as he drew near the door, the musical voice of Priscilla Singing the hundredth Psalm, the grand old Puritan anthem, Music that Luther sang to the sacred words of the Psalmist, Full of the breath of the Lord, consoling and comforting many. Then, as he opened the door, he beheld the form of the maiden Seated beside her wheel, and the carded wool like a snow-drift Piled at her knee, her white hands feeding the ravenous spindle, While with her foot on the treadle she guided the wheel in its motion. Open wide on her lap lay the well-worn psalm-book of Ainsworth, Printed in Amsterdam, the words and music together, Rough-hewn, angular notes, like stones in the wall of a churchyard, Darkened and overhung by the running vine of the verses. Such was the book from whose pages she sang the old Puritan anthem, She, the Puritan girl, in the solitude of the forest. Making the humble house and the modest apparel of homespun Beautiful with her beauty, and rich with the wealth of her being! Over him rushed, like a wind that is keen and cold and relentless, Thoughts of what might have been, and the weight and woe of his errand; All the dreams that had faded, and all the hopes that had vanished, All his life henceforth a dreary and tenantless mansion, Haunted by vain regrets, and pained, sorrowful faces. Still he said to himself, and almost fiercely he said it: "Let not him that putteth his hand to the plow look backward; Though the plowshare cut through the flowers of life to its fountains, Though it pass o'er the graves of the dead and the hearths of the living, It is the will of the Lord; and His mercy endureth for ever!" So he entered the house; and the hum of the wheel and the singing Suddenly ceased; for Priscilla, aroused by his step on the threshold, Rose as he entered, and gave him her hand, in signal of welcome, Saying, "I knew it was you, when I heard your step in the passage; For I was thinking of you, as I sat there singing and spinning." Awkward and dumb with delight, that a thought of him had been mingled Thus in the sacred psalm, that came from the heart of the maiden, Silent before her he stood, and gave her the flowers for an answer, Finding no words for his thought. He remembered that day in the winter, After the first great snow, when he broke a path from the village, Reeling and plunging along through the drifts that encumbered the doorway, Stamping the snow from his feet as he entered the house, and Priscilla Laughed at his snowy locks, and gave him a seat by the fireside, Grateful and pleased to know he had thought of her in the snow-storm. Had he but spoken then, perhaps not in vain had he spoken: Now it was all too late; the golden moment had vanished! So he stood there abashed, and gave her the flowers for an answer. Then they sat down and talked of the birds and the beautiful spring-time, Talked of their friends at home, and the Mayflower that sailed on the morrow. "I have been thinking all day," said gently the Puritan maiden, "Dreaming all night, and thinking all day, of the hedge-rows of England— They are in blossom now, and the country is all like a garden; Thinking of lanes and fields, and the song of the lark and the linnet. Seeing the village street, and familiar faces of neighbors Going about as of old, and stopping to gossip together, And, at the end of the street, the village church, with the ivy Climbing the old kray tower, and the quiet graves in the churchyard.

"Why Don't You Speak for Yourself, John?" Kind are the people I live with, and dear to me my religion; Still my heart is so sad, that I wish myself back in Old England, You will say it is wrong, but I can not help it; I almost Wish myself back in Old England, I feel so lonely and wretched." Thereupon answered the youth: "Indeed I do not condemn you; Stouter hearts than a woman's have quailed in this terrible winter. Yours is tender and trusting, and needs a stronger to lean on; So I have come to you now, with an offer and proffer of marriage Made by a good man and true, Miles Standish, the Captain of Plymouth!" Thus he delivered his message, the dexterous writer of letters— Did not embellish the theme, nor array it in beautiful phrases, But came straight to the point, and blurted it out like a schoolboy; Even the Captain himself could hardly have said it more bluntly. Mute with amazement and sorrow, Priscilla, the Puritan maiden, Looked into Alden's face, her eyes dilated with wonder, Feeling his words like a blow, that stunned her and rendered her speechless; Till at length she exclaimed, interrupting the ominous silence: "If the great Captain of Plymouth is so very eager to wed me, Why does he not come himself, and take the trouble to woo me? If I am not worth the wooing, I surely am not worth the winning!" Then John Alden began explaining and smoothing the matter, Making it worse as he went, by saying the Captain was busy— Had no time for such things;—such things! the words grating harshly Fell on the ear of Priscilla; and swift as a flash she made answer: "Has he no time for such things, as you call it, before he is married, Would he be likely to find it, or make it, after the wedding? That is the way with you men; you don't understand us, you can not. When you have made up your minds, after thinking of this one and that one, Choosing, selecting, rejecting, comparing one with another, Then you make known your desire, with abrupt and sudden avowal, And are offended and hurt, and indignant perhaps, that a woman Does not respond at once to a love that she never suspected, Does not attain at a bound the height to which you have been climbing. This is not right nor just: for surely a woman's affection Is not a thing to be asked for, and had for only the asking. When one is truly in love, one not only says it, but shows it. Had he but waited a while, had he only showed that he loved me, Even this Captain of yours—who knows?—at last might have won me, Old and rough as he is; but now it never can happen." Still John Alden went on, unheeding the words of Priscilla, Urging the suit of his friend, explaining, persuading, expanding; Spoke of his courage and skill, and of all his battles in Flanders, How with the people of God he had chosen to suffer affliction, How, in return for his zeal, they had made him Captain of Plymouth; He was a gentleman born, could trace his pedigree plainly Back to Hugh Standish of Duxbury Hall, in Lancashire, England, Who was the son of Ralph, and the the grandson of Thurston de Standish; Held unto vast estates, of which he was basely defrauded, Still bore the family arms; and had for his crest a cock argent Combed and wattled gules, and all the

Eliza's Engagement

By JOHN OSBORNE FIELD

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Well, good-bye, Eliza, I hope you'll have a good time," said pert little Molly Dobson, flaunting her recently acquired diamond solitaire ring in the sunshine. "And I hope," she teased, "that you'll come home engaged, too, to some nice city man. Write and tell us all about it."

Molly laughed, as if the idea of Eliza's becoming engaged were a huge joke. Eliza's uncle, John Robinson, patted her shoulder with embarrassment and her Aunt Emma Robinson tried to smile naturally. The station master whistled with forced cheerfulness.

"That Molly Dobson's an awful mean girl," he said to himself. A moment later Eliza jumped aboard the train that was to take her to the city, and before long the little group of friends on the station was just a blur in the distance.

Eliza was twenty-eight and she had determined to go to the city for a few months of excitement. The comfortable routine of her life at Dayville, where she had lived with her aunt and uncle from babyhood, had begun to pall. Her days were never empty. There were active hours spent out of doors planting and pruning flowers and vegetables and tending her chickens and ducks; and other active hours spent in the pleasant, sunny kitchen over savory preserve kettles or the week's fragrant baking. There were long placid evenings on the vine-covered piazza under the stars or beside the glowing sitting-room stove, with the dozing Uncle John and chattering Aunt Emma and purring Tabby for companions. There were occasional excursions—picnics and carry-all drives and once in a while a jaunt with one of the young men of the village. But Eliza knew that the years to come would be identical with the years that had passed, and she grew discontented.

It was this perfectly comfortable state of affairs but wholly uncomfortable state of mind that had induced Eliza to set forth on the first real adventure of her life. She made her voice an excuse; it was a sweet, light everybody present she sank back into her chair with a feeling of disappointment.

"Why, he isn't here," she thought. "I couldn't even pretend he was that silly young man that makes jokes; besides he and the pale little girl seem quite taken with each other. Oh!"

Eliza started. Opposite her was a vacant chair. A serious looking, tall young man, with keen gray eyes was just taking his place there, and Mrs. Benson Brown was saying: "Oh, Miss Morgan, this is Mr. Wilbur."

"How do you do Miss Morgan," said the man, his face lighting with a smile of friendliness. "Sorry I'm late, Mrs. Brown."

Eliza breathed more easily, and the next day she mentioned "a very pleasant young man—about thirty-five I should say—whose name is Wilbur," in her letter to her aunt, and a few days later she wrote to Molly Dobson of a walk in the park she had had with Mr. Wilbur, "the nicest man you ever saw."

The weeks passed quickly with Eliza. Each other she wrote home contained some reference to Mr. Wilbur. Once he had brought her a book—she had given him the money for it and had asked him to get it, but she did not mention these facts; again he had brought flowers, and she shuddered when she wrote this down, for it was true. There were brief references to real conversations between the two, and long accounts of imaginary talks and excursions together. Finally, at the end of three months, Eliza's friends in Dayville received word that she and Mr. Wilbur were engaged.

"There are still three months to break it in," thought Eliza. It was three or four days after Eliza had announced her engagement. She had come down stairs to look for letters on the hall table, and sat in Mrs. Brown's dimly lighted parlor reading them. There were half a dozen—all letters of good wishes and congratulations. "I know you'll be happy; it's lovely to be engaged," wrote Molly Dobson. Eliza trembled guiltily as she read them. She left her uncle's until last, but finally she tore it open. "If you are sure he is the right man, dear child, I am glad. But don't make a mistake; you seem so far away from everything and everyone that you are used to, and know. Don't do anything you will regret later."

Eliza buried her head in one of Mrs. Brown's sofa cushions with a sob. "Don't do anything I'll regret," she repeated. "Oh, how wicked, wicked I've been." Then, suddenly Eliza realized that what she was crying for was that she and Mr. Wilbur were really not engaged.

Eliza heard a footstep by her side and looked up into the grave eyes of Mr. Wilbur.

"Why, you poor little girl," he said gently, kneeling down and putting his arms about her.

"Don't cry, Eliza, pulling herself free. "Oh, you mustn't," and she rushed past him into the hall and up to her room. Once there she locked the door and set to work to write a confession.

"I must tell you," she wrote, "although you will hate me when you know. I can't explain why, but I wanted the folks at home to think me engaged—to you. I never thought it mattered until I found that I cared—and that you do, too. I don't ask you to pardon me; and as I shall never have to know how much you despise me for it, I am going home to tell them that my engagement is broken."

The next day Eliza, pale and tired, arrived unexpectedly at the station at Dayville.

"Hello, Miss Morgan," said the station man, as he helped her with her bags—she was baggage master, porter, telegraph operator and ticket agent all in one—"I certainly am glad to see you. A queer message come over the wire for you. Just going to send it over to your aunt."

Eliza took the yellow telegram and read: "Don't tell anyone it is broken. Am coming on the next train to help you mend it."

"Anything valuable that's broken?" queried the man curiously.

Eliza flushed and smiled. "It's the most valuable thing I ever had," she said slowly. "But the cracks will never show after it's mended."

Risked Life for Comrades. A story of wonderful heroism in the rescue of the stokehold staff of the destroyer Kangaroo after an explosion of a steam pipe was related a few days ago at the Inquest at Haslar Hospital, Hants, England, on the two men who were killed—Chief Stoker Henry Huttfield, and First Class Stoker Ernest William Fryer. Members of the crew, the commander included, descended with towels round their heads into the inferno of steam to endeavor to rescue the sufferers, but Huttfield and Fryer had been killed instantaneously from asphyxia by the scalding steam. The pipe that burst was a bent branch pipe, which had been straightened out by the pressure of the steam.

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. The doctors said I could not get well without an operation, for I could hardly stand the pains in my sides, especially my right one, and down my right leg. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle of Compound, but kept on as I was afraid to stop too soon."—Mrs. SADIE MULLEN, 2728 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration. If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

Fred—I love you a whole lot. Tess—Frank told me yesterday that he loved me a whole house and lot. Practical Illustration. To shorten a long Sunday afternoon for Fred, aged eight, his mother told him that he might illustrate the twenty-third Psalm in any way he chose. Quiet reigned for a time, as Fred, busy with pencil and pad, drew "shepherd" and "green pasture," "rod and staff." Then a silence ensued, followed by a noisy clatter which brought his mother to the room. Fred was busily arranging a train of cars, a toy gun, marbles, etc., on the table. "What are you doing, Fred?" "Why," he answered, "these are the presents of my enemies."

New tables have arrived for the commercial department and they are dandy; also electric lights have been installed in this room.

The Juniors made good at their measuring social Friday evening with their program and refreshments. The gipsy queen was quite an attraction, Heitsch being her first victim, and she foretold bright futures for many present.

Alfred Bergman discovered Monday that the chairs in the commercial room were not good rockers.

Come to the football game Saturday. The literary club was reorganized Monday evening.

Do you want a cat? If so apply to the principal.

Among our visitors were Rev. Bennett on Monday and Rev. Grigsby Tuesday.

Eighth Grade. This grade gave a Columbus Day program, Thursday. A fine program was given. Among our visitors were Mesdames Kenny, Hilliard, Gregory and Huntsberger.

We have completed "The Raven" and are taking up "The Vision of Sir Launfal."

Seventh Grade. The Seventh Grade observed Columbus Day with a good program.

The Sixth Grade wrote essays on Columbus for Thursday.

The Third Grade are making linoleum patterns this week. They invited the fourth grade in for a Columbus Day program Thursday.

The Second Grade made cuttings to illustrate Columbus story. Mrs. Chapman visited them Thursday.

First Grade. Both classes have finished the Ward primer. Some very nice paintings have been made by the youngsters.

If you do not believe that this is a wide-awake up-to-date church with the goods delivered come and join the large congregations and be convinced. The prayer meetings are growing in numbers and interest. Over thirty in attendance each Thursday night for the past two weeks. The members of this church are heartily co-operating with the pastor for the best year in its history. Can we depend on you?

The annual meeting of the Methodist Ladies Aid was held at the home of the President, Mrs. Anna Barrette and the following officers were elected:

Knights of the Holy Grail.

The Knights of the Holy Grail of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday School held a very successful meeting Monday evening in the church parlors. After the castle work was over the knights sat down to a chicken pie supper. We need not tell that the boys did justice to the supper. The dishes were left. The election of officers resulted as follows:

King Arthur—Gordon Payne. Commander—Myri Crowell. Vice Commander—Stewart Carr. Knight of the Scroll—Alfred Blake. Knight of the Purse—Ivan Atkinson. Prelate—Russell Barnett. Herald—Vern Richards.

All boys over fifteen years of age are invited to join.

The effort of the brewers and saloonkeepers of Michigan to have it believed that violation of liquor laws are related to prohibition and to local option and that there are circumstances and conditions under which the beer trade and the whiskey trade would pursue its course without seeking to evade and violate the laws have come to be thoroughly understood by the newspapers of this state. And this understanding is that no matter where located or under what form of so-called "regulation" the saloons will violate any laws that seek to limit or control their operations. It does not matter whether the city or community undertakes to regulate the liquor traffic by limiting the number of the saloons or by charging $1,000 license or by refusing licenses, or by county, township or precinct local option laws. The retailer of liquor have the same attitude toward regulation or limitation of every kind and character. They are always demanding an alteration. They are always arguing that if the law is to be enforced it must be amended. And if it is not amended they brazenly call attention to their own violations as proof of the law's weakness. No other business in existence makes use of its own lawlessness as a reason why it should be granted favors. No other law-breaking element boasts of its own vicious accomplishments as reason why such law-breaking should be continued.

Presbyterian Church Notes

Rev. A. D. Grigsby, Pastor.

The Pastor of the Presbyterian church thanks his friends for the large attendance last Sunday morning and evening. In it he sees the results of the Rally and he hopes that this may be permanent. The big chorus choir now reorganized for evening services was doubtless an added attraction and will be during the winter months.

Next Sunday the 15th his topic in the morning will be "Life as a School." He specially invites Public School Teachers and Pupils. In the evening he will give an object lesson talk on "A Lead Pencil and Its Suggestions."

The Superintendent of the Sunday School was cleared in the attendance last Sunday of new pupils and begs parents to co-operate with him by bringing their children who it may be are running the streets and depriving themselves. Begins at 11:45.

Junior C. E. in charge of Mrs. Grigsby at 3:15.

The Senior Endeavor meeting was largely attended last Sunday evening and held an entertaining meeting. Young people not attending this or similar meetings are cordially invited to come and join if they wish. Begins at 6:15.

HELPFUL HINTS ON HAIR HEALTH

Scalp and Hair Troubles: Generally Caused by Carelessness.

Dandruff is a contagious disease caused by a microbe which also produces baldness. Never use a comb or brush belonging to some one else. No matter how cleanly the owner may be, these articles may be infected with microbes, which will infect your scalp. It is far easier to catch hair microbes than it is to get rid of them, and a single stroke of an infected comb or brush may well lead to baldness. Never try on anybody else's hat. Many a hat-band is a resting place for microbes.

If you happen to be troubled with dandruff, itching scalp, falling hair or baldness, we have a remedy which we believe will completely relieve these troubles. We are so sure of this that we offer it to you with the understanding that it will cost you nothing for the trial if it does not produce the results we claim. This remedy is called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We honestly believe it to be the most scientific remedy for scalp and hair troubles, and we know of nothing else that equals it for effectiveness, because of the results it has produced in thousands of cases.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is devised to banish dandruff, restore natural color when its loss has been brought about by disease, and make the hair naturally silky, soft and glossy. It does this because it stimulates the hair follicles, destroys the germ matter, and brings about a free, healthy circulation of blood, which nourishes the hair roots, causing them to tighten and grow new hair. We want everybody who has any trouble with hair or scalp to know that we think that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is the best hair tonic and restorative in existence, and no one should scoff at or doubt this statement until they have put our claims to a fair test, with the understanding that they pay us nothing for the remedy if it does not give full and complete satisfaction in every particular. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in East Jordan only at our store—The Rexall Store. The W. C. Spring Drug Co.

The DOG on the FARM

THE HOUND A FAVORITE WITH MANY FARMERS.

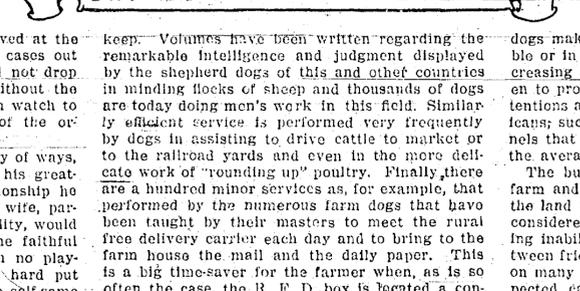

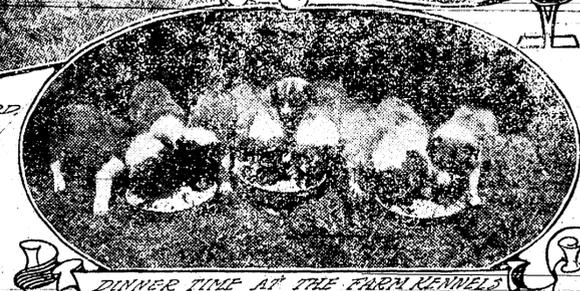

THE POPULAR FOX TERRIER

LONG familiarity induces the average farmer to bestow nary a second thought upon many a factor in farm life that he would discover, when he was suddenly deprived of it, plays a most important part in the routine of rural existence. Among these things animate and inanimate of whose influence we are so dimly conscious a prominent place should be accorded to "the farm dog,"—or probably it would be better to say the farm dogs, for it is rather unusual for a farmer to have only one canine helper and he may possess half a dozen, without giving any more thought to the subject than the average city man would have to bestow upon one small four-footed servitor.

For all that the busy and preoccupied farmer accepts the presence of

A dog on the farm has a bearing on the case. As a sheep dog or indeed for any duty in connection with "minding the stock" there is no dog to compare with the faithful collie. And the collie is a mighty fine all-around dog, too. Proverbially, good-tempered and gentle and possessing the highest order of intelligence, he justifies by the possession of good qualities his handsome appearance. And finally, be it said in his favor that if a farmer desires to establish a canine colony for profit there is no class of dogs that will sell more readily or bring better prices than the collies.

his favorite dog so much as a matter of course it is noticeable that the favored animal seems to have some mission as "man's best friend" that requires his presence on all occasions. Certainly a trip to town would be incomplete without Rover romping along, barking teasingly and snapping playfully at the patient Dobbin or leaning out of the tonneau to bay at passing vehicles if his master has arrived at the luxury of an automobile. And in nine cases out of ten the farmer and his family could not drop contentedly off to slumber at night without the assurance that one or more dogs are on watch to give quick warning of anything out of the ordinary.

The dog on the farm helps in a variety of ways, but it is a question after all whether his greatest value does not lie in the companionship he affords. The farmer and the farmer's wife, particularly if they live in an isolated locality, would be mighty lonely at times save for the faithful dog and a lone child on a farm, with no playmates within several miles, might be hard put to it for amusement were it not for the self-same animal—proverbially patient under childish tyranny and ever ready to join in any diverting project. And, since most people consider big dogs the best companions, the farmer is fortunate in his ability to choose with reference to such preference. The city man living in a house in a row or, worse yet, cooped up in a flat, finds the term "house dog" synonymous with small size, but in the country, where the average home has a large lawn and the dwelling has wide porches, there need be no line of discrimination drawn between the house dog and the "out doors dog."

Closely linked to the sentimental value of the farm dog as a companion is the worth of the service he renders as a guardian of life and property on the farm. It is not merely, for instance, that such a dog can serve as companion for the farmer's wife when she is left alone, but better yet, he is able to offer very tangible protection from annoyance by tramps or other unwelcome visitors. Similarly the intelligent canine can exercise an almost human watchfulness over the children when they are out of sight and out of hearing of their elders, and in proof of the dog's capabilities in this role it is only necessary to point to the very frequent rescues from drownings in which dogs play the part of heroes.

At night when the farmer and his family are asleep this vigilance on the part of alert canines is an almost invaluable safeguard and under ideal conditions it affords the farmer as good or better protection than can be claimed for his city cousin residing on a street patrolled by policemen. It is because of the diverse responsibilities of this night sentry work that many a shrewd farmer thinks it wise to keep not merely one good dog, but three or four. With one dog inside the house and another outside the building and with other dogs inside and outside the barn the farmer need have little fear that he will lack for warnings should anything out of the ordinary transpire. These dogs can be depended upon, moreover, not only to give warning of the approach of trespassers, but they are equally serviceable as alarmists should fire break out or should any of the stock get loose in the night or invade the feed bins.

Such canine services tangible as their value, are by no means all the responsibilities that grateful dogs assume in return for their modest keep. Volumes have been written regarding the remarkable intelligence and judgment displayed by the shepherd dogs of this and other countries in minding flocks of sheep and thousands of dogs are today doing men's work in this field. Similarly efficient service is performed very frequently by dogs in assisting to drive cattle to market or to the railroad yards and even in the more delicate work of "rounding up" poultry. Finally, there are a hundred minor services as, for example, that performed by the numerous farm dogs that have been taught by their masters to meet the rural free delivery carrier each day and to bring to the farm house the mail and the daily paper. This is a big time-saver for the farmer when, as is so often the case, the R. F. D. box is located a considerable distance from the dwelling.

Some persons have even predicted that the time will come in America when some of our farmers will employ dogs as they do in Holland and other foreign countries to draw the carts of milk to the creameries and do other work that we now entrust to horses, but this prediction is not generally accepted because of the great distances involved in this country. However, there is no reason why the usefulness of intelligent canines should not be still further developed and certainly as the "automobile habit" spreads in the rural communities the farmers are going to find dogs indispensable in one more direction, for it has been proven that there is no deterrent like a dog that looks as though he meant business for warning off the joy riders who are wont to appropriate automobiles that they find standing unguarded in the corners or in a market space or at a picnic. All the above has reference, of course, to the value as helpers on the farm, but this by no means exhausts the possibilities of the subject. On an increasing number of farms it has been found that dogs can be made a source of actual revenue. This is accomplished by breeding blooded dogs for the market. It is of necessity a "side line" to be sure, but it can be made a most profitable one, for fine dogs bring big prices and the farmer has the facilities for breeding dogs under the best conditions without a fraction of the investment that would be required of a man who established a kennel on a tract of land used for no other purpose. Moreover the farmer's wife and children can do most of the work of caring for the dogs, just as they do in so many instances in the case of the poultry. There is not much danger that it will prove irksome either, for there is nothing more amusing than the average puppy, and he does not as a rule require that extreme solicitous care that must be bestowed upon some other classes of pet stock.

The species of dogs which may most advantageously be selected as farm helpers is, of course, a matter of individual opinion and there are almost as many different opinions on the subject as with the regard to the age at which people should marry. Naturally, personal preferences on the part of the farmer and the members of his family oftentimes have much to do with a choice and then again the sort of assistance that is desired from dogs make their headquarters in the barn or stable or in some one of the outbuildings, but an increasing number of country gentlemen have taken to providing dog houses of greater or less pretensions and on the estates of some wealthy Americans; such as J. Pierpont Morgan, there are kennels that cost a good deal more than the barn of the average prosperous farmer.

The bulldog is famous as a watch dog on the farm and there are many farms all up and down the land where one of these pugacious beasts is considered indispensable. However, the seeming inability of many a bulldog to distinguish between friend and foe has put the clan in bad favor on many a farm where there are numerous unexpected callers or where summer boarders from the city are included in the household in vacation season. The smaller dogs such as the Boston and fox terriers, the black and tans, etc., are well represented on the farms. Such dogs are more dependable than some of the heavier species for duty as watch dogs inside dwellings or farm buildings and if the canine family becomes too numerous it is usually easy to find a market in the city for the surplus, the city folks being partial to these small dogs. One thing that the farm dogs have had to learn of late years is a respect for the automobiles that whiz past at scandalous speed. Not a few valuable dogs were killed on the rural roads ere the meaning of the new menace was learned.

BIRDS FIGHT THEIR IMAGES.

But So Do Fish, for That Matter, According to Darwin.

A correspondent for the Scotsman recently reported what he described as the "curious freak" of a blackbird flying against a parlor window many times at the same spot continuously. Such an incident is not uncommon. Birds have been known to fight for hours at a time, day after day, with their own image reflected in a pane of glass, pecking and fluttering against the pane and quite exhausting themselves in their fury to demolish the supposed rival. It is another instance of how the arts of our civilization corrupt and confuse the birds.

It is the same with fishes. Darwin tells a story of a pike in an aquarium separated by plate glass from fish which were its proper food. In trying to get at the fish the pike would often dash with such violence against the glass as to be completely stunned. It did this for more than three months before it learned caution. Then when the glass was removed the pike would not attack those particular fish, but would devour others freshly introduced.

WOMAN'S WIT WINS LETTERS OF UNCLE

FORTUNE-TELLER GETS COMPROMISING MISSIVES, BUT CLEVER NIECE REGAINS THEM.

LAYS CLAIM TO $10,000 FEE

Diplomacy of Mrs. Mae Briant of Arkansas Enables Her to Get for $50 Documents for Which Wealthy Recluse Offered a Fortune.

Little Rock, Ark.—By exercising the diplomatic ability which twice made her postmistress of the House of Representatives of Arkansas, Mrs. Mae Briant of Harrisburg, will, unless the supreme court decides otherwise, receive $10,000 from the estate of A. W. Shirey, the wealthy recluse who was assassinated in his store at Minturn last year.

Shirey, during the latter part of his life, was a spiritualist. He welcomed all who pretended to know anything of spiritualism and paid well for their teachings. In 1909 a woman from Little Rock, calling herself a spiritualist, went to Minturn and called upon the aged miser in his store. Shirey immediately made arrangements for readings in the attic room of the store at night. For several weeks the woman remained, Shirey holding nightly communion with the spirit world through the alleged medium. Finally he was persuaded to write five letters and place them in custody of the woman until a later date.

After the woman had gone Shirey began to consider the consequences if the letters should be made public. His efforts to locate the woman were futile, so he sent for Mrs. Briant, his favorite grandniece. He offered her $10,000 if she would get possession of the papers, and Mrs. Briant undertook the task.

Coming to Little Rock, Mrs. Briant had little trouble in locating the alleged spiritualist and arranging for a series of readings. At one of these Mrs. Bryant confided to the spiritualist that she had been jilted by a wealthy old merchant of Lawrence county and was seeking to force his hand. The spiritualist grabbed at the bait and informed Mrs. Briant she had some letters from such a person, which, if placed in the possession of the injured young woman, might materially assist her in her case. The letters were offered to Mrs. Briant for $500. Several days were spent in negotiating, and the letters finally went to Mrs. Briant for $50 and were then returned to Shirey.

Mrs. Briant's claim has been allowed by the probate court of Lawrence county, but an appeal has been taken to the supreme court by the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the chief beneficiary under the Shirey will.

The assassination of Shirey was the most atrocious crime committed in Arkansas last year. The old man, who owned several hundred thousand dollars worth of property in Lawrence county, had been married several times, the last to Faure Belle Hill, a girl of fourteen years, whom relatives claimed he had wronged. The couple did not live happily and both made efforts to get a divorce.

The supreme court of Arkansas declined to permit either a divorce and required Shirey to pay the girl-wife alimony. He was about to bring a new suit for divorce when he was assassinated. Shirey was seated on a sack of potatoes near the door of his store, across the road from the Minturn depot, when a lone horseman rode up to the porch and shot him dead. The assassin escaped in the gathering darkness.

Shirey left all his property to the Odd Fellows' lodge in Arkansas, but relatives filed suit to break the will, and the lodge compromised, giving the relatives a liberal portion, and agreeing to defend all other suits filed against the estate, any judgment to be taken from the lodge's share.

Mrs. Mae Briant is one of the best known women in Arkansas. She first came to the Arkansas legislature a young widow and at the close of the session was married to a member. She again came to the session of 1911 as a widow and was easily re-elected postmistress.

SECOND BIBLE A NECESSITY

Experienced Minister Knew What He Was Talking About When He Advised Junior.

"Now that you are married," said the experienced minister to the young curate, "you will have to stop using the church Bible for home study. Oh, yes, I know how it is. You get attached to a certain Bible, and can study better with that right under your nose, and would willingly pack it back and forth for the inspiration it affords. I've been through it. Used to do that very thing myself, but after half a dozen vols and a pair of gloves and some little lacey things that I shall not attempt to specify floated down from the pulpit on Sunday mornings in view of the astonished and amused congregation, I accustomed myself to two Bibles. The women press. It is a habit you can't break them of, and the first thing you know these feminine knick-knacks go sailing away to humiliate you."

That night the curate turned the pages of his Bible carefully. A veil and a scrap of lace fell out. He sighed. The next day he began to cultivate an affection for a second Bible.

PHYSICIAN SAID ECZEMA CAME FROM TEETHING

"When my little girl was about eight months old, she was taken with a very irritating breaking out, which came on her face, neck and back. When she first came down with it, it came in little watery-like festers under her eyes, and on her chin, then after a few days it would dry down in scaly, white scabs. In the daytime she was quite worrisome and would dig and scratch her face nearly all the time.

"I consulted our physician, and found she was suffering from eczema, which he said came from her teething. I used the ointment he gave me and without any relief at all. Then I wrote for a book on Cuticura, and purchased some Cuticura Soap and Ointment at the drug store. I did as I found directions in the Cuticura Booklet, and when she was one year old, she was entirely cured. Now she is three years and four months, and she has never been troubled with eczema since she was cured by the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. (Signed) Mrs. Freeman Craver, 311 Lewis St., Syracuse, N. Y., May 6, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 2 K, Boston.

Although somewhat belated the information that the advocates of constitutional prohibition in Maine were victorious gives none the less pleasure and encouragement to those who are fighting the saloons and breweries in Michigan and elsewhere throughout the United States. It comes from the office of the secretary of state of Maine that the majority against the saloons will not be less than 700. More money was spent in Maine by the liquor interests of this country for the privilege of debauching that state than was ever spent in any state in the union to control the votes of men. A majority of 700 may not seem large to those who survey its proportions from a distance but when it is realized that this majority was gained against the concentrated efforts of the distilleries and breweries and saloons and houses of prostitution of thirty or forty states all struggling to make sure their own advancement and existence it stands as a splendid tribute to the manhood and womanhood of Maine. When compared with the expectation of the liquor forces 700 majority against the saloon and the brewery was a most notable and satisfactory victory.
