Milliken's coming... strike up the band!

EAST JORDAN - The school band will be playing patriotic songs, a special spaghetti dinner is planned, and a varsity football game is even being delayed for half an hour.

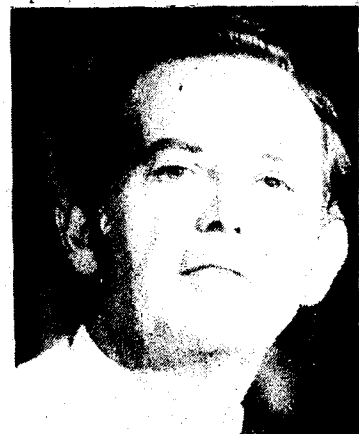

Yes, the governor is coming to town Friday. It will be the first time William Milliken has been to East Jordan-at least since he's been governor and as far as area residents know, it will be the first time ever.

He'll be here at 5:45 p.m. to dedicate the new high school. East Jordan school officials are doing their best to make it a day the governor and area residents won't soon forget.

School Supt. Mel Rullman said he called the governor's office about a month ago to ask if Milliken would be able to take part in the dedication ceremonies. "Since he signed the bill that made it all happen, we thought it would be appropriate for him to see the results," Rullman said. He was referring to a special bill that enabled the former Twin Valley School District to demerge into separate East Jordan and Boyne City districts.

Milliken signed the bill in October of 1976, setting up an election on the demerger question in January, 1977. The demerger was overwhelmingly approved and less than three months later, East Jordan voters approved a proposal to build the new high school. Doors were opened to students for the first time this September.

Governor Milliken

"The demerger may not have been a big deal for the governor, but it sure was for us," Rullman said.

So after a follow-up phone call last week, Rullman found that the governor would indeed be able to come to East Jordan, since he was scheduled to make a campaign swing through the area Friday.

Friday's festivities will start at 4 p.m. with a spaghetti dinner hosted by the East Jordan Athletic Boosters. Tickets are $3 for adults and $2 for children, and proceeds will support the school athletic program.

Dinner will be served until the governor arrives at about 5:45 p.m.

The dedication ceremony will be held in the gymnasium. It will begin with songs by the school band, and invocation, and recognition of the people who worked on planning groups before the school was built.

Student council president Jane Noiro will introduce the governor, who will make some brief remarks.

Then the architect and construction manager will formally present the key to the new school to school board president Dick Noiro-who will be flanked by his daughter (the student council president), Principal John Winter and teacher Roger Ransom.

The ceremony is expected to end by 6:15 or 6:30, and the building will be open for tours for the next hour or so.

Some folks will be leaving early to get to the Red Devils' football game in Harbor Springs. The game, originally scheduled to start at 8 p.m., will start at 8:30 so the football players can attend the dedication ceremony.

Concerned

Park idea still iffy

BY JIM BAUMANN

EAST JORDAN - Will property in the Deer Creek dam area be developed as a park?

The property is now owned by the East Jordan Industrial Development Corporation, and members of the board of directors aren't all sure what should be done with the property.

The issue of public use of the land was brought into the limelight earlier this summer. A group of area young people staged a demonstration and came to a city council meeting to protest the city limiting hours the property could be used.

Young people have used the area for years for parties, swimming and as a general gathering place. The property is located south of the city and just north of the airport. It includes water frontage on Lake Patricia and Deer Creek.

Around Aug. 1, when the young people began investigating the possibility of leasing the land from the city, they discovered that the IDC, not the city, owned the land.

Nothing has been done with the property since the city decided it to the IDC in 1962, and most local residents and city council members were still under the impression that it was public land.

Now the future of the property is undecided.

IDC member Jack Zoulek says he personally would like to see the land given to the local Lions and Rotary Clubs to develop into a park.

"It's a beautiful, wild area," he said. "I've got fond memories of it from when I was a kid. I caught fish there and cooked them over an open fire. It's always been a super place."

"The availability of a place to go fish and do your own thing is getting less and less all the time," Zoulek said. "I just don't think we ought to let that land go into private ownership."
"I realize there is a problem of how to patrol the place, but maybe we could get a group together to help out with that. We can't say we can't unless we try."

Fellow IDC member Sherm Thomas agrees with Zoulek, but he stresses that someone must be willing to follow through with the park idea.

"A few years ago, we pretty much agreed that it would make a real nice park for the Rotary and Lions, but not much was done with the idea."

"I would like to see it become a park, it would be a wonderful place for the whole county, not just East Jordan. But it's going to take somebody with some ambition to get it going," Thomas said.

Some other IDC members aren't at all sure what should be done with the property. They point out that the IDC hasn't even met to discuss the issue.

IDC member Jim Petrie said "I don't have the slightest idea what should be done. I'd like to talk to more people about what the public thinks would be best."

Walt Thorsen, IDC president is skeptical about the park idea. "It's been tried before," he points out. "I don't see how the Lions and Rotary can police a park out there. There's been no discussion of it on our boards, so for now we're just going to leave it in the hands of the IDC."

On the part of the clubs, Rotary president Dick Alderton said there has been no recent formal discussion of the subject among club officers. "But we would be glad to help with anything like that and I'm sure the Lions would be too. As service clubs, we work pretty closely together on other projects."

"Whatever's good for East Jordan, we're all for it," Alderton said. A lot of things could be done out there, and I'm sure if someone did develop it, it would make a nice park."

Nature trail work bee is Saturday

EAST JORDAN - Volunteers are being sought for a work bee on the East Jordan School nature trail this Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Adults with chain saws and shovels are needed to cut trees and to fill in dirt around a stairway which has been constructed by high school students.

Other adults and youngsters 12 and older can also help by picking up trash and clearing out brush which has been cut with the chain saws. Hand saws can also be used for pruning along the trail.

Anyone interested in helping should meet behind the tennis courts at the middle school. Those planning to work are asked to call 536-3241 ahead of time, because a lunch will be served by the East Jordan Lionses.

About half of these people will be back in East Jordan this weekend for the 50th year reunion of the class of 1928. Can you recognize any of them from their graduation picture? In the back row, from left, are (with + marking deceased class members): Thelma McDonald, Dorothy Hager, Ruth Clark+, Esther Pederson+, Harriet Chaddock, Norma

Class of '28 coming back

EAST JORDAN - It's just coincidence, but the dedication of the new East Jordan High School this Friday comes on the same weekend that the class of 1928 will be holding its 50 year reunion.

Most of the class members don't live in the area any longer but some of them will be coming to the reunion early enough to go to the dedication ceremony Friday afternoon.

Of the original 24 members of the class of '28, five died by 1931. But in the next 47 years only three more have died, leaving 16 survivors today.

Of those 16, George Secord and Harriet (Chaddock) Chanda are the only ones still living in the East Jordan area.

Secord said about 12 of the 16 surviving class members are expected to come back for the reunion.

All will get a chance to see the new high school, even if they don't make it to the dedication ceremonies. School Supt. Mel Rullman will give the class members a tour of the new school Saturday afternoon.

"Then we'll probably have a gabfest in the cafeteria when the tour is over," Secord said. He pointed out that this will be the second new high school they have seen built. The school they graduated from burned in 1941, and the building now used as a middle school was built as a new high school the following year.

The highlight of the reunion will be a banquet at the Jordan Inn Saturday evening. While Secord has been helping plan the reunion, he said "the real instigators" are Margaret (Staley) Saunders of Belleville and Norma (Griffin) Conklin of Big Rapids.

In other action, the council: -Learned that the fire department would be holding an open house from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday during national Fire Prevention Week.

-Authorized City Clerk-Treasurer Fern Morris to shut off water service to 21 customers who are six months delinquent in paying their bills. Customers who are three months late in paying have until Monday to pay their bills, or they will also have service terminated.

voiced their agreement.

Rasch said he considered the street project important enough that he spent most of a week supervising the contractors.

"I told them the spots where they needed to go heavy and other places where they could lighten up. You don't have to lay it so thick where the street isn't in real bad shape or where there isn't much traffic."

"If we get about two more seasons like this, you're going to be proud of your

Council happy with street work

EAST JORDAN - City council members committed a considerable amount of money to street repaving this year, and they are happy with how their money was spent.

At Tuesday's council meeting, City Supt. Herman Rasch reported that 4,029 tons of asphalt was laid on city streets last month. Total cost of the paving was just over $80,000.

"I want you to know, Herm, those streets really look nice," said Mayor Jim Meredith, and other council members

Hospital drive reaches $750,000 goal and still keeps climbing

CHARLEVOIX - Charlevoix Area Hospital's Fund Drive has reached and passed its minimum goal - $750,000 - and is moving rapidly toward $800,000. Board of Directors President Thomas Carey announced Tuesday, in a press conference at the hospital.

A jubilant Carey, speaking for everyone who worked on the campaign and thanking them for their dedication, said, "It is very gratifying that we have done so well. This is more than three times the amount of money ever raised in a local fund drive. That is a significant vote of confidence for our hospital."

"It is important and a challenge, now, to continue to solicit funds for this project, because the more that is raised through donations, the less the hospital will have to borrow," Carey said.

"It would be terrific if we could raise another $100,000. I know the potential is awaiting us in the community."

Explaining further why the fund raising efforts will continue, Carey said, "The less we have to borrow the lower our interest payments will be."

"Lower interest payments will help minimize the effect of this project on hospital costs."

"The less we have to borrow the lower our interest payments will be."

Fund raising organizers explained that the campaign reached the $750,000 mark despite the fact that only half the businesses and industries in the area have announced their donations, to date, and many individuals have yet to be solicited.

The campaign offices are being moved to the hospital office buildings, where a core of campaign volunteers have agreed to continue working.

Administrator Richard Krueger, and Carey explained that the time table for the Expansion and Renovation Project is aiming at a mid-June date for the start of construction.

Between now and next June the architects working plans will be completed and it is anticipated that bids for construction will be set in late Spring, 1979.

Meanwhile, the Charlevoix Area Hospital Board of Directors is also exploring the possibility of direct grants from foundations to help with financing the renovation project.

"Every effort is being made to reduce the total amount we will have to borrow," Krueger explained.

The project is estimated to cost $2.1 million.

Krueger explained that once construction begins the project will take a year and a half to complete. "We will do each section step by step, so that patients and hospital staff will experience minimal inconveniences."

Salmon stopper

The state Department of Natural Resources has installed these fish weirs across the Jordan River near Rogers Bridge. It was put there to stop large chinook salmon from swimming upstream and interfering with the spawning of trout. The Jordan does not offer good habitat for salmon spawning, but it is a good trout spawning stream. The weir is made of pipes which are placed close enough together to keep the large salmon from swimming through, but the smaller trout are able to pass through. Periodically, the salmon strapped between the weirs are netted and the eggs are sold to bait shops. The weirs will remain in the river until Oct. 30. Until that time, fishing downstream from the weirs is prohibited.

EJ United Way begins

EAST JORDAN - To collect and distribute money to those less fortunate than themselves, the East Jordan Community Chest started its annual drive on Sunday, October 1 to help support worthy agencies.

Walter Goebel, president of the East Jordan Community Chest, said there is an Internal Revenue Service restriction that says any group collecting money cannot donate to any organization that isn't recognized by the IRS as a non-profit group, such as Big Brothers-Big Sisters. The Community Chest, in conjunction with the United Way of Michigan, has been around since 1942, making it one of the oldest chapters in the state. The chest officials hope that they do well this year with a projected goal of $14,000.

Last year their goal was $11,000, but the chest drive brought in almost $13,000.

Goebel said that the Community Chest runs their drive differently than other drives. Their system is through employee payroll deduction of small and large businesses, which comprises about 60 percent of the chest's contributions. Last year about $5,000 came from Gulf and Western with some employees giving up to $5 per week from their paychecks, said Goebel.

Another way the chest gathers money to give to needy organizations is through the mail. About 1,980 names have been gathered from the East Jordan area. The volunteers sent out envelopes explaining the group's cause and asked for donations. At one time they went door to door but the mailing system may prove better, Goebel feels.

Lastly, Goebel said, they go into various businesses, show a film and explain to a firm what the Community Chest is, with hopes that they will give a donation.

As of now, Goebel said that there are about 15 volunteers. They are still in need of volunteers to participate in their fund drive. Anyone wishing to donate some time to helping with the drive or donate money this year can contact Della Dixon, 536-2173 or Walter Goebel, 536-2924.

The United Way helps numerous agencies, both local and state wide. Some of these agencies are: Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Big Sisters-Big Brothers, Bergman Center, Area Mental Health, Little League, Drug Awareness, Salvation Army, American Red Cross, these are local groups.

Author of letter in question

Last month The Press printed a letter signed by a John Howard criticizing the Boyne City school system for having two nurses. John R. Howard of Marshall Road, a new resident of the area, has contacted the newspaper to inform us that he is not the John Howard who wrote the letter.

The Press has been unable to locate the John Howard who wrote the letter in question.

Because the possibility has arisen that the letter writer may not have used his own name, The Press is now asking that future letters include the address and phone number of the writer. We will use the phone number to verify that the signer actually did sign the letter.

'The shiners are bad'

CHANDLER TOWNSHIP - Not just the harvest moon has been shining on this fall in Chandler Township. Local residents say they have been bothered by "shining," the practice of using headlights, spotlights or any other form of illumination to spot deer.

There was a time when shining was illegal, but the law was declared unconstitutional. So shining, while often bothersome to area residents, is legal as long as you don't shoot at what you shine at. That's poaching, because deer season doesn't start until November, and hunting at night is illegal year round.

"The shiners are bad," says Beatrice Howard of Walton Road. "I don't know what we people out in the hills are going to do."

"They drive right into our driveway and they're shining," she says. "It shines up rooms inside the house."

Mrs. Howard says the shining is worse this year than usual. Her son Dennis, Chandler Township supervisor, says he worries that some shiners do more than look at the deer they spot. He says out-of-season hunting is an increasing problem.

"People are knocking deer down," Howard says. He said that over the Labor Day weekend he heard a shot found a dead doe the next day. By that time, the meat had spoiled. "It was such a waste," Howard says.

Howard says since then he has seen a fawn roaming the woods by itself, the apparent orphan of the doe that was shot. "So we'll probably lose two of them," he said.

Conservation officers from the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) are fighting long odds when they try to catch poachers and illegal shiners, according to Jim Genc, area law supervisor. "It's really like trying to catch a needle in a haystack," he says.

Genc said that several years ago the DNR tested its enforcement capabilities by sending out officers posing as hunters into the woods to shoot into the air at night and "commit" other violations. Area conservation were not told of the test.

Of 200 violations, only one person was caught, Genc said. "It's not that the officers aren't doing their jobs," he says. "It's that they're spread out so thin." He said there are approximately 185 officers covering the entire state.

But Genc says there wouldn't be much the DNR could do about shiners even if it had more manpower. "It's not against the law to shine. There's nothing we can do about it unless they have firearms. People usually don't mean to shine windows."

He said many people shine for deer, bears and raccoon just to get a close look at them. That's legal. But he adds that "We've picked up a couple crews of shiners with rifles." Such offenders can receive fines of up to $250.

Even during the hunting season, hunters aren't allowed to shine while carrying guns. Genc says that allowing hunters to shine would take some of the sportsmanship out of hunting.

"It's an easy way to kill them because the light blinds them," he said. "But there isn't much sport to it."

Genc said poaching and illegal shining get worse all the time. "It's not quite so bad around here because there aren't really that many deer. But statewide, it's increased. This time of year you always have it happening."

Genc said the DNR feels that more deer are shot illegally than legally. "To some people it's just a challenge to see if you can avoid getting caught," he said. "Others might have had their eye on some big buck all summer and worry that if they wait until the season, somebody might get it ahead of them."

Bea Howard agrees. "We've had this problem for years," she said, "but it's getting off to an early start this year." She said she also had one hunter come to her door and ask for apples to feed the deer. The idea is to coax the deer into position for an easy shot. "I don't call that sportsmanship," she said. "Do you?"

Dennis Howard thinks that some shiners are after cattle, not deer. "They shine the fields very close to your house and you don't know if they're shining deer or your cattle," he said. "When they shoot cattle, it might be accidental or it might be intentional."

Howard said butchered cattle have been found in fields in past years, stripped of their meat.

Since the DNR is understaffed and can't arrest shiners unless they're armed, Howard says some Chandler residents are taking matters into their own hands. "We've been a little redneck about shiners up here in this corner," he said.

Howard says when somebody shines on his property he asks them to quit. "I explain that we don't know what their intentions are, whether they've just come to look at deer or are going to shoot at them or our cattle," he said.

CHIROPRACTORS SEEK RESEARCH VOLUNTEERS

The International Pain Control Institute in conjunction with New York Chiropractic College is presently engaged in what is the most extensive research program ever undertaken by the chiropractic profession. This research is directed toward determining the relationship between health problems and spinal misalignments and utilizes a screening process called Contour Analysis.

Volunteers are being sought for screening. Contour Analysis enables taking a three-dimensional picture (called Moire photography) of the topography of the surface of the spine to detect spinal stress deviations. This analysis will be correlated with leg deficiency, patient symptomatology, and levels of spinal tenderness. An analysis of this type can reveal such things as normal and abnormal stress patterns, spinal curvature, muscle spasms, muscle imbalance, spinal distortions, and scoliosis.

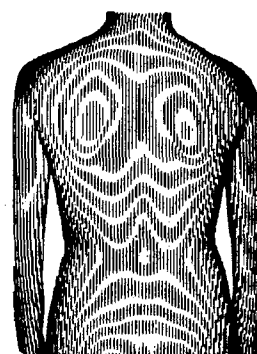

There is no charge to participating volunteers, since the doctors are contributing their time, service, and facilities for the program. Final processing and evaluation will be done at the New York Chiropractic College.

Anyone wishing to be a volunteer may telephone participating doctors directly for information or an appointment.

As this picture shows, the Deer Creek dam area already has the scenic beauty needed to make an attractive park. But now help from the community is needed. See editorial below. (Press photo by Jim Baumann.)

Deer Creek dam would be good for park site

An idea we feel has some merit - and at least deserves to be fully explored - is that of making a real park out of the Deer Creek dam area south of East Jordan.

Editorial

The question of how the area can best be used was brought up this past summer in a very round-about way. A group of young people trying to convince the city council to let them use the area later at night stumbled onto the fact that the city didn't own the land-as most people, including city council members assumed. The city had actually given the land to the East Jordan Industrial Development Corporation.

IDC members are undecided or split in their views of what should be done with the property.

Some point out that a few years ago, the IDC was willing to donate or lease the property to the Rotary and Lions Clubs for use as a park. But there was little follow-through at the time. A major stumbling block was the question of how the area would be adequately policed.

That is still probably the main problem.

But the dam area, which includes frontage on both Deer Creek and Lake Patricia, is so perfectly suited for a park that it deserves another look from the IDC.

There is still land available along highway M-32 which could be used for industrial purposes, and the part of the property near the lake is not well suited for industrial use. As one IDC member points out, unspoiled park land is fast disappearing. At the same time, the number of people moving to the area is rising.

We urge the IDC to consider giving area service clubs another chance to develop a park in the area.

Break out trusty thumb

The best way to make a judgement about a business is to watch how it operates when it has problem with a customer or client.

In the news business there are those in the public eye who respond to criticism - by yelling and screaming about the bias and inadequacy of the press. And then there are those who understand that there can be two, three, or more sides to any issue and understand the role of the press in our society. They remain calm, professional.

Of course, the press is not faultless. Some newspapers choose all-out war with a press critic rather than rational opposition.

All this is by means of an introduction to my involvement in the past few months with the two businesses that control public transportation in our part of the world. I speak of North Central Airlines and North Star Lines, the bus operator. North Central fails the test that all service operations undergo from time-to-time: North Star passes.

Let me explain.

Although we all own cars - at least it seems that way, doesn't it? - there are times when we must use the public transportation systems. On occasion, someone in the family must travel downstate for a wedding, an illness of a loved one, an unexpected death. At such times the car must remain here in Charlevoix County for essential use by other members of the family. There are no options for convenient travel throughout our area. For long-distance occasional travel, we are forced to rely on North Central and North Star.

You might recall my column of some weeks ago about what I and eight other Pellston-bound passengers believed was incredible operational bungling by North Central that led to our flight being terminated without warning in Traverse City one Friday midnight.

On another occasion during the past summer I was forced to use the bus to travel downstate one Sunday. This trip was terminated without notice in Cadillac.

Very quickly, here is what happened. When the bus driver announced a 10-minute coffee stop in Cadillac, I was one of the first passengers off the bus because I had missed breakfast in my rush to catch the bus in Traverse City. When I found the restaurant next to the bus station closed, I went down the street to find one that was open. As I waited minutes later to pay for my take-out items, the bus roared by heading south on Highway 131.

The announced 10-minute stop had apparently become a five-minute one because the convenient restaurant wasn't open. The other passengers-probably not as hungry as I was- had apparently returned promptly to the bus.

George Colburn

The response to my official complaint about the North Star driver's action was a long letter of explanation and apology from a vice-president, a refund for my ticket that had not been used, and a reimbursement for a telephone call I made to a friend in Lansing telling her of my plight and asking her to pick up my personal belongings on the bus when it arrived.

The company did not reimburse me for the extra bus ticket I had to buy from Grand Rapids to Lansing (I hitchhiked from Cadillac to Grand Rapids), but that is of no great import. Perhaps the official thought that the ticket cost was covered by the refund of the Cadillac-Lansing fare.

Much more important to me was the tone and substance of the letter. In it the vice-president said the incident has been investigated and the company had concluded that the bus driver was in the wrong on at least two counts. However, he did attempt to rationalize the driver's action in making an unscheduled stop and then leaving early without all the passengers. I can understand an official's desire to give an employee's side of an unfortunate incident. The implication was that I should have marched back to the bus like all the others. Trouble is, as my mother has always said, I never marched with the crowd.

In my reply to North Star, I pointed out that if I had not been male, young (I like to think so), accustomed in earlier years to hitchhiking around the state, my stranding could have been a most serious matter. It could have been winter, not summer; I could have been elderly, and I might not have known my way around the state. The Cadillac bus station was not open and it would be 4-5 hours before the next bus was due.

My point in saying all this was to emphasize to the company the possible serious consequences of the driver's action if the person stranded had been someone other than me. I was inconvenienced somewhat, but my mother might have been in a state of shock if it had happened to her.

I don't like transportation monopolies, or monopolies of any kind, for that matter. Too often it can lead to a disdain for people. But I know, too, that sometimes we must live with them, because competitors cannot survive when there is a limited audience. The reply from North Star leads me to think that they are concerned about their customers despite its monopoly here in the north.

I feel quite differently about North Central Airlines, an operator that I must patronize far more often than North Star.

The airline's response to the fury of their passengers that was unleashed when we were stranded far from home in the middle of the night was a three-sentence mimeographed statement, and another brief printed statement in a similar vein attached to a refund check. The statements carried no names or signatures.

The former began, "We are sorry your flight was interrupted." The fact is that our flight wasn't interrupted. It was terminated prematurely in Traverse City by the company. The reason remains a mystery to this day. The employees on the scene could only speculate lamely on why the plane due to take us to Pellston had left 25 minutes before we arrived.

The statement continued: "Your refund is based on the air fare versus the cost of the ground transportation which was provided." That's right, we the passengers - not North Central - had to pay for the trip to Pellston by van after North Central's arbitrary action.

The third and final sentence stated: "We hope that you will be flying with us again soon and that your next trip to North Central is entirely enjoyable."

It's like having your face rubbed in the dirt by a bully.

We are all captives if we want to fly out of here on a commercial carrier for business or for pleasure.

But what can we do?

Those were the days, my friends

Was there life in Boyne City before four on the floor and bucket seats?

Oh yes Virginia, Boyne City was cluttered with a flurry of activity, stubborn facts, personal folly and foibles long before television made seeing a circus.

When folks seldom strayed beyond where the gravel drizzled off into the end of the world, life was a far cry from this souped up disco whirl of nine digit zip codes.

Of this life and of that life I shall now speak, updating the past for those strong enough to stand the shock.

Two for a penny brought a "Thank you, and here's a sack to put it in." Today, it's two for a dollar and "You're holding up the line."

Short hair was the fad of the day. When long hair grew upon the scene one was hard put to tell whether the man at the wheel was a woman or not.

Marshall Sayles

Beer gardens were called saloons and, unlike today, no woman was allowed to enter. Bewiskered men were gifted with the knack of throwing them out before they ever got in.

An occasional French post card raised a woman's hands in holy horror. Today, the Devil and the dancing girls are bounced around the living room by means of a seeing eye radio.

As our spearpoint lost its flavor on the bed post overnight, few people would have shed a tear over commercial construction while supporting unemployment compensation at the same time.

Do you want to defy the moral code and federal laws of nineteen ought ten? Simple. Just turn on your TV set and watch it for 10 minutes.

And look at the strangers wandering around the north country. In our rural whirl of thing they were called tramps and hobos. But since they've gotten a little money, we call them tourists.

Boyne City is one of the many small towns making up the backbone of a great nation. But it has been in trouble ever since shopping at home played out. If a merchant doesn't have a spool of green thread in stock a woman will drive 30 miles to get it. And while she's there she will buy a week's groceries just to tickle her fancy. Back there before the automobile a woman's fancy went untinkled for weeks on end until arrangements could be made to get her out of town.

Oh, my gosh! This column is becoming so serious I cannot force myself to continue.

Letter to the editor

Buy locally

Editor,

How about a look at the tannery project from about 15 miles, over in the Jordan River Valley? That way you miss several stop signs, numerous crooks, curves and turns as well as the power plant at Advance and Cal Coblenz's Bull, Cow and Calf Boutique!

I must confess that this is slightly biased letter. I own a farm. So my sympathies lean slightly in favor of the business man who may have $100,000 tied up!

Someone said, "We need a Giantway and Wickes store in place of condominiums!" My terse definition of such stores as Giantway is that they are "the place where good union people got shop after they've gone on strike for higher wages and more fringe benefits, which eventually put the things they make out of sight." So they go to these stores and buy stuff made in countries on the other side of the world that we never even heard of 20 years ago! If you take a close look you'll find that the "Made In U.S.A." goods they sell are priced almost identical with your local stores!

We recently went to Giantway's grand opening in Traverse City. The better half was looking for a particular item. But they didn't have it. One writer mentioned the Shafer's. So out of curiosity we stopped in at their store when in Boyne City about a week ago. And there in front of us, was the item we looked for in a big store!

I recently found a sample of paneling - at the local lumber yard - that I needed to finish a wedding gift. It would be in on Tuesday. But it didn't come. The supplier didn't have it. I had only three days left. Joel said, "Heck! If they don't have the stuff, here take the sample with our compliments!" He saved the day for me! Think one of those big lumber yards would bother to do that for you? And when you've gotten old enough to tear up your credit cards and suddenly run out of money I think you'll find that it is the "Little store on the corner" that is most apt to trust you until your next social security check arrives!

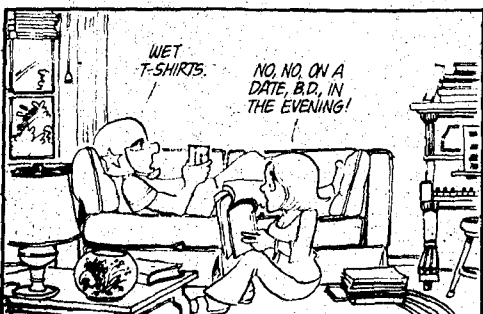

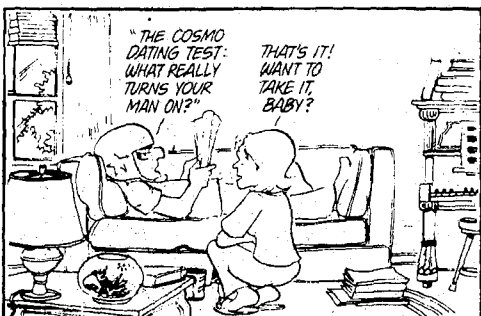

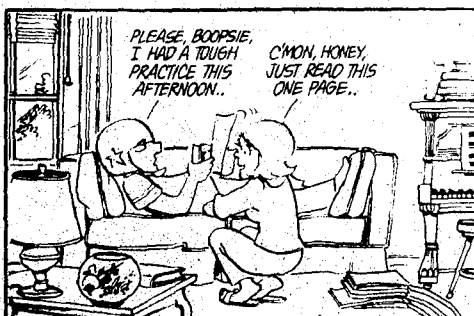

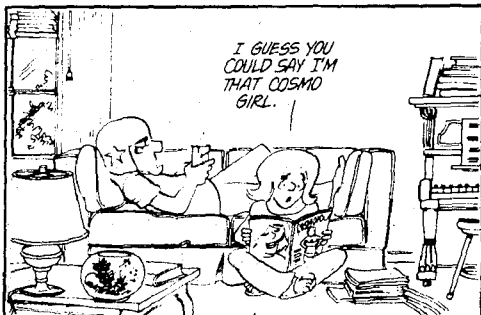

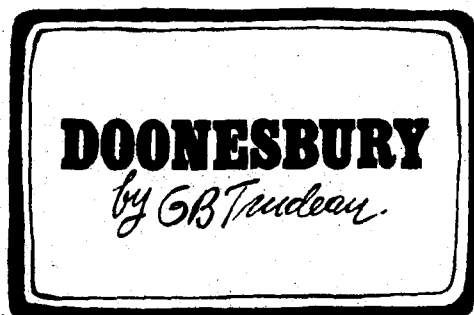

And those little stores, mostly privately owned, are the only places where you can plop down on the counter - if business happens to be dull at the moment and just plain "shoot the bull." It's the nearest we have left to the old Round Oak stove the cracker barrel!

Someone worried about the $70,000 cost of new roads to handle traffic! If you put big stores and factories on Front Street just how long do you think that crackled up pavement will last with a couple of dozen 18 to 44-wheeler trucks with 20 ton and over loads on it every day? $70,000 will be just a drop in the bucket! And you'll really see what "increased traffic" on Division St. is like! Surely you don't think all that traffic will go thru downtown with all the traffic lights and congestion you already have.

As for the increased traffic being dangerous, I say BUNK. We moved on M-66 in 1948. The foundry was running a truck per day with nine ton loads. They now put out from 25 to 40 loads per day running from about 20 to as high as 90 tons gross! Try that on Division St.! And now we have traffic from a dozen or so plants in East Jordan and Charlevoix that weren't even in existence in 1948. I'd say that traffic is at least 50 times heavier now and we haven't had a school bus accident.

My only hope is that the City Commission will see to it that this is a thing of beauty instead of that mess at the other end of the street. In the meantime, patronize your local merchant! You need him!

Ribbon cutting ceremonies were held Friday at the new office for Family Federal Savings in Charlevoix. The new office is located near the Captain's Corner shopping center at the corner of U.S. 31 and M-66. The new location gives Family Federal a drive-up window, something it did not have in its downtown office. Office manager Albert Lord shows the drive-up window to Fred Theuer, president of Family Federal, as Deanne Potter, who works in the office, looks on. Lord said the drive-in facility and additional parking are the most important aspects of the new office. "Convenience is important to people, and we've made it as convenient as possible," he said.

Good deed

Three's can be too much

Everybody talks about the "terrible two's" when referring to the trying times of toddler years.

I'm going to talk about the one that most people are too afraid to mention - "precocious three's."

Merely whisper those two words in a room full of people and you will be able to spot all of the parents immediately. The color will have drained from their faces and they will have a death grip on the nearest person. Their eyes will dart quickly around the room as their hoarse voices cry "where?"

I know the feeling. I have a precocious three-year-old and went through that stage with my two older children.

First of all, three-year-olds are cute. They can be dressed to look like little angels and are even charming with chocolate covered faces. One thing I might add, is that the three-year-old is fully aware of this and uses it to the best advantage.

Secondly, three-year-olds are busy. My daughter Sara does not sit down for any longer than two minutes at a time. The rest of her waking hours are spent yelling at her older brothers to put their jackets on before they go outside, taking her dolls to the "doctor" for a shot, emptying the vacuum cleaner bag on the floor "so it will work better, Mommy" (this is done with the sweetest smile in the world), practicing pitiful faces in the mirror, and running through the house shrieking.

On the last item, the child will end it by running into a door so that you end up kissing the "boo-boo" instead of handing out the reprimand that was about to be delivered had she not been "mortally" wounded.

Hazel Colburn

Three-year-olds are also good at teaching parents about guilt. Last week, shortly before my husband and I were to go out, she sat down next to me at the table.

"Where you going?" she asked with a long face.

I looked the other way, because if you look into the sad eyes of a toddler about to be left at home, you're done for. "Out," I answered.

"Are you going to get a baby-sitter?"

she asked, her voice quivering.

"Yes," I answered, still not daring to look into her eyes.

"But where are you going?"

"Just out." In a vain attempt to help her look forward to her evening at home I asked what she planned to do while we were gone.

She thought for a moment, "Cry," she said.

GUILT.

But they get even. That's one thing you can count on. She, my husband and I had lunch at the Depot one day last week. There were several other people in the restaurant, but it was still very quiet.

My husband dropped one of his french fries on the floor. No big deal, right? Wrong.

A moment went by, then Sara, in her loudest "ha-ha I gotcha voice," said, "Dropped one, didn't you?"

Mike Burr mentioned last week that he has children, but never had a three year old.

"How did you manage that one?" I asked.

"Well, we just skipped it," he answered.

"It's called planned parenthood."

I wish I would have known that was possible. Anyone with a two-year-old, maybe you'd better talk to Mike and find out about this amazing new technique.

IN MEMORIAM

In Memoriam
God has called our sister Janet L. White to be with him in Heaven. She had been under doctors care for months. Now she is under Gods' loving care forever. When Gods' calling is so strong it causes one to take their own life, we must be confident as Jan was, that life after life is much more beautiful than earthly words can describe.

Our earthly loss is Heaven's and Jan's gain. For she is at peace with God. A memorial fund has been formed for the Mental Retardation Association a group Jan worked with and displayed special compassion for during her life. (see obituary)

Tisch Amendment: can it save you $$$$?

Who will save money and who won't if the Tisch amendment becomes law?

Dr. Al House, Michigan State University specialist in agricultural economics, describes a simple method to figure out whether or not your pocketbook will benefit by passage of the proposal.

To figure out whether you would save money on your property taxes if the proposal passes, you must first determine what you're paying now.

Computing what you now pay under the current property tax system requires some very simple arithmetic. Multiply your total household income for the year by .035. Subtract the product from the total dollar amount of your property tax. Multiply the remainder by .60. Subtract the product from the total dollar amount of your property tax. The remainder shows what you really pay in net property tax, considering the credit on your income tax.

For example (if you are under 65): Your household income $20,000; times the tax adjustment rate .035; equals your income adjustment factor $700.

Your total property tax $1,100; less the income adjustment factor $700; equals the excess of property tax over factor $400. Times the general formula credit rate .60; equals what you may deduct from your income tax . . . $240.

Total property tax $1,100; less property tax credit $240; equals the net property tax after income tax credit $860.

On the other hand, if the Tisch amendment passes, for most people in most years, there will be little or no homestead property tax credit on state income tax. Instead, your property tax (for current operation budgets) will be cut approximately in half immediately. In other words, the total property tax of $1,100, as shown in the example above, would be reduced to about $660 in a typical community. (Additional property tax assessments for debt in your community would not be cut - such as debt for public buildings and improvements.)

But what happens to local governments (cities, counties, townships, etc.) who rely on property tax revenue - usually for about 50 percent or more of their funds? According to House, the state would be obliged to help make up that loss. Additional taxes would need to be assessed to make up the difference.

House predicts that an increase of 1 percent in the state personal income tax will be one of the first steps taken by the state. In addition, electors in local school districts will be asked to vote on the question of a local school income tax of up to 1 percent. Cities, which now have no income tax, will consider a 1 percent income tax to help make up lost revenues.

Property owners and everyone else subject to income taxes will pay higher income taxes. How much would those income tax increases add up to? The hypothetical family with a $20,000 income would probably pay an additional $155 (based on three dependents) for the increase in state income tax, and would pay $155 for the increase in local income tax. Those increases plus the $660 in property taxes, bring the total up to $970. This family would save nothing as a result of the Tisch proposal. It would cost them more to shift from property taxes to higher income taxes.

Assuming lost revenues would be replaced by other taxes, whether or not you would save money by the Tisch plan depends upon your household income and property tax.

Generally, upper middle to high income persons would pay more total tax under the Tisch amendment if a higher personal income tax were substituted for lost property tax revenues.

If you are 65 or older, you already receive a generous tax saving under the present tax system through the homestead tax credit. Therefore, senior citizens would tend to gain little from the Tisch property tax cut, according to House.

Those who would save tax dollars if the amendment passes are low-income homeowners under 65 and owners of valuable land (such as farmers and income property owners). Certain businesses paying high property taxes could also save a large amount.

An increase in state and local income tax will help, but it won't be enough to totally compensate local governments for the loss of property tax revenues, according to House. Therefore, a lower property tax will probably mean loss of services in communities that do not replace lost property tax revenues, he says.

"Before pulling the lever in November, voters should carefully weight effects of the Tisch proposal on public services. Will you really be satisfied with a lower level of public services?" House asks.

Services which rely heavily on property tax revenue for their operating costs include local police departments, county clerk's office, prosecutor's office, circuit courts, public property maintenance, street cleaning services, solid waste removal, libraries and arts programs.

"Passage of the Tisch amendment would affect communities differently because some rely more heavily than others on property tax revenue. The more local governments rely on that revenue, the more they'll have to cut back on community services or find ways to replace lost revenues," he explains.

The state has other tax options, including raising the single business tax. However, House says that raising the single business tax (essentially a tax on the privilege of doing business in Michigan) would be difficult without first rewriting the single business tax law. As the law stands now, business would save property tax money through the Tisch amendment, but that saving would be eliminated if the single business tax were increased enough to recover property tax revenues lost.

What's ahead for school funding?

BOYNE CITY - Did the school system have its last millage election Monday?

The question of millage is finally settled for this year after voters approved 18.9 mills for the current school year Monday by a 674-462 vote. But the future of school funding will be on the line in the November 7 general election.

One of the proposals on the ballot is for a school voucher tax system. If it passes, schools would be funded by state income tax instead of the current system, under which taxpayers in each district vote on how much property tax they want to spend on schools.

Two other proposals, expected to have strong chances of passing, would also effect school funding. The Tisch Amendment, similar to California's Proposition 13, would cut property taxes in half and limit the annual increase in property assessments to 2 1/2 percent.

The Headlee Amendment, somewhat less extreme, would limit state spending to its current share of personal income in the state.

One person who will probably be voting against all three tax measures is Richard Kelly, Boyne's school superintendent. "All of them would effect school funding," he said.

Kelly is especially concerned about the voucher proposal. "Even though our millages were defeated twice, I'm still in favor of local people deciding how much funding the schools get," Kelly said.

"The way it is now, we know exactly how many dollars we're going to get. Under the voucher, if the state had a bad year, there would be no guarantee of how much money you would get."

Part of the school's budget already comes in state aid, so Kelly knows how uncertain it can be. He said one year during the gasoline shortage the auto industry had a bad year, so the state lost tax revenue and the school system had its appropriation cut $70,000 at the last minute.

The school system had enough reserve money to survive that unpleasant surprise, but might be in rough shape if something similar happened next year. It's reserve funds are down because the board lowered its millage request after seeking 20.6 mills in the first two elections and being soundly defeated.

Monday's election will provide $1,119,245 in voted tax revenue for the schools. The tax will be collected in December. The total school millage, voted and allocated, is 31.45 mills, down from 31.76 last year. But property owners will still be paying more this year because property values have increased.

Under the millage passed Monday, the owner of a $20,000 home will be paying $188 in voted millage, up $10 from last year. Kelly says the millage approval will enable the school system to keep its present program. He had warned that a third defeat might result in layoffs and the dropping of extracurricular activities.

But all those worries were gone Monday night, as school officials sat back and enjoyed the end of the long road to getting millage approved. "I'm going to go home, plop my feet up and relax tonight," said a happy Ed Snyder after the results were announced. The elementary principal noted the wide margin of victory, saying, "It's nice to get a good healthy margin. It's good to get that support."

Rich Kelly said, "Am I ever relieved. I've had frogs jumping in my stomach all day."

Kelly said he predicted earlier in the day that the millage would pass by 150 votes. He said he felt the wide margin was caused by voters realizing the school board had lowered its initial request.

After the first millage defeat, some school officials said the approval of Proposition 13 encouraged local voters to turn thumbs down on any tax increase. Now, even though Boyne's millage has been approved, Kelly says, "I don't think there has been any let up in the tax revolt."

"It's hard to look a year in advance, especially with all the issues on the ballot. But it's going to be tough."

Old City Park might get a facelift

BY JOE McELROY

BOYNE CITY - It's the city's forgotten park. Sitting along the Boyne River between Park and East Streets, Old City Park is used mainly by a few teenagers who hang out near the bridge.

But the park may be getting a facelift. Boyne City Manager Tim Clifton says he plans to apply for a grant from the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to restore the park. And some members of the city's Parks and Recreation Commission have expressed a desire to spruce up the park.

"It's a real pretty park, but it's not being used," Clifton said. "It has so much potential." Clifton said that the park also has a wide variety of trees, which could be identified for educational purposes.

Clifton said the city will probably apply for the grant sometime after the first of the year. He's not yet certain how much money the city will seek. "It's all in the preliminary stages right now," he said.

The money would come from the DNR's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation and would be on a 50-50 match basis. That means the city would put up a dollar for every dollar provided by the state.

But instead of laying out cash, Clifton said, the city could use the services of its employees, such as the street department, for its part of the match. "I think a lot could be done for $100,000," Clifton said. He said the city might only have to provide approximately $10,000 in actual cash, which would come from next year's general revenue budget.

"We're going to look at the place and see what we need to put in the park to attract more people," Clifton said. There was a time, according to long-time local residents with special interest in recreation, when the park was widely used.

"It used to be a great place to picnic," says Boyne Community Recreation Director Mike Davis. Thelma Behling, a member of the parks commission, says, "I can remember playing in a band in the gazebo that used to be there when I was a little girl."

Davis said new facilities in the park, such as a bandshell, would be "ideal, because it's near the downtown area and that's where the people are, especially in the summer." He also suggested a small dock for fishing and canoe launching into the river.

The park is presently littered with cans and graffiti carved into many of the benches and tables. So why fix up an area if people are going to abuse it? "If it's spruced up I think vandalism will go down," Davis said.

"The place looks like hell now. Nothing ever happens down there. But I think that if people saw the place was being taken care of, they'd take better care of it themselves."

The subject of renovating the park came up at last week's meeting of the Parks and Recreation Commission. The members had somewhat mixed emotions about the project. Some members expressed frustrations that the commission hasn't tackled any specific problems, but others warned against being too hasty.

"It seems like we're spinning our wheels," said commission member Bruce Janssen. "If the community can give us the money to do this, fine. Otherwise, let's try to get some private money."

Commission chairman Dick Fish cautioned, "I agree that something needs to be done, but I'm not sure this is the place to jump into."

To which Janssen replied, "I think we should jump into something."

Fish questioned whether the commission would be able to do the research needed to get the city park project off the ground. "Nobody on this committee has the time to sit down and dig out all that information," he said.

Jeff Bradford responded, "If it doesn't happen here at this table, it's not going to get done. We have a lot of expertise here and we should put that expertise to work."

City Manager Clifton thinks the city has a "super-good" chance of receiving state funding for the park. Mike Davis agreed, saying, "The state offices are trying to channel more money into the northern districts lately instead of the urban areas."

"In the past, the urban areas got the money because they had more pull. But now that's changing because they're realizing this is a recreation area for people from the cities as well as people who live here."

In other action at the parks commission meeting, the commission accepted the resignation of Dick Cunningham. Those interested in being on the commission can contact City Hall.

The city also has a vacancy on the Planning Commission. Clifton said anyone interested in being on any other commission should also contact him, because there is a rapid turnover. "It's good for us to have a backlog of people who are willing to serve," he said.

Last chance

This will probably be the last month you will be able to walk down to the Boyne City lakefront on a warm evening to take in the sunset. Press photographer Sandy Vansteenkiste took advantage of the opportunity last week to take this picture.

Your fun guide

You can see for miles from the top of Dead Man's Hill.

Hill with a view has colorful history, too

There's an interesting bit of history that goes along with Dead Man's Hill, one of Michigan's most popular fall color-viewing spots.

The next two weekends, as fall color hits its blazing peak, the hill will be crowded with people. They'll be enjoying the panoramic view of the Jordan River Valley.

The view is so spectacular that a sign on U.S. highway 131 points it out as a scenic lookout. To get there, take 131 about nine miles south from Boyne Falls and turn right at the sign. The hill is two miles west of the highway.

A large sign at Dead Man's Hill tells how it got its name: "The period of early logging in the hills of the Jordan River Valley was marred by several fatal accidents. The last known and best recalled tragedy took the life of 21 year old Stanley Graczyk (Big Sam), a fun-loving lumberjack, soon to be married. He became legend on May 20, 1910, when he was killed while driving a team and "big wheels" loaded with logs down a steep slope near here. This high point, with its commanding view of the valley, has ever since been known as "Dead Man's Hill."

Before that sign was put up, there were a number of conflicting tales about exactly how Big Sam met his fate. One story said he was killed in a blasting accident.

The story was cleared up once and for all on Nov. 20, 1969, when Tony Wojciechowski of Boyne Falls, who had been present when Big Sam was killed, finally set the record straight with a letter to the editor of the Northland Press. (Wojciechowski died earlier this year.) Here is his letter:

Dear Editor,

I'm sick and tired of reading phony accounts of the death of Stanley (Big Sam) Graczyk, who figured in the naming of Dead Man's Hill.

I was present and helped carry Big Sam off the road with a man by the name of Tony Miller. He was my wheel loader. The date was sometime in May of 1910 to the best of my knowledge.

What actually happened was: "Big Sam" was running between the logs and the eveners on the horses. He stumbled and fell in the wheel track, but threw his body out and the bunch of logs caught his feet and pulled his body under the wheels.

I was there sitting on another pair of wheels waiting for Big Sam to go by me. When the wheels ran over him, I jumped up and ran over and raised his head and asked him, "Are you hurt?" He did not answer, he just kind of rolled his eyes and looked up at me.

The wheels are not at the site as some writers have claimed. They were pulled right out of there the day that he was killed.

Before this accident happened, Big Sam had broken an axle on his wheels and killed a horse; and this is the axle that probably was left in the woods that is sometimes referred to as the lost wheels that killed Big Sam.

Big Sam never lived in the Bohemian settlement. He lived in Elmira, he was not a Bohemian, he was Polish, and he lived with his sister, Mrs. John Ojezynasz, who lived just across the road from the Ray

Autumn race planned

Short and long distance running makes its debut as one of the highlights of the annual Bellaire Autumn Festival this month, with the announcement this week that the Bellaire Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the First Autumn Festival Run.

The event will include runs of one, six and 13 miles, and will be held Sunday, October 15, from the community's Richard Park. Runs will be directed by members of the Alden Track Club.

Over $300 in trophies, medals and ribbons will be offered to competing runners. And there will be six age classes, including both male and female, for each of the three runs.

Entry fees are: $1 for the mile run; $3 for the six mile; and $4 for the 13 mile run. The mile run will begin at noon; the six mile at 12:30 p.m. and the 13 mile at 1 p.m.

One of the directors of the event is Gregg Smith Jr., son of Gregg and Margaret Smith of Boyne City. Entry forms can be obtained from the Bellaire Chamber of Commerce or at the Antrim County News.

Dancing, cooking, sewing classes to start soon

EAST JORDAN - Community Education classes in dancing, cooking and sewing will be starting this weekend and next week.

"Dance with Ruby" begins Saturday, October 7, from 7:30-8:30 p.m. Once a month (the second Saturday after this time), Ruby Dipzinski will be teaching couples various dances. This Saturday, is fifty night featuring the swing and fifties requests. Cost is $1 per person per session or $3 per person for all four sessions. "Vegetarian Cooking" is back by popular demand with Myrtle Stewart as the teacher. The class begins Thursday, Oct. 12 from 7 to 9 p.m. and it is free.

Thelma McKinnon will be teaching two classes. "Sew an Outfit" will meet on Tuesdays beginning Oct. 10 from 7 to 9 p.m. "Cake Decorating" will meet Mondays from 7-9 p.m. beginning Oct. 9. Cost for each class is $12.

The dance class will be held in the elementary school gym, and the cooking and sewing classes will be held in the new high school. To register, call 536-3241.

Jordan River Pathway -- one of the best around

If you're out to enjoy fall colors, it's hard to beat Dead Man's Hill. But there's more there than a view and a picnic area.

The top of Dead Man's Hill is also the beginning of what some people think is one of the best hiking trails you'll find anywhere.

The state Department of Natural Resources opened the Jordan River Pathway in June, 1977.

It begins with a three-mile loop around the Dead Man's hill area, but for more serious hikers, the entire trail is 18 miles long. The full 18-mile trail is designed as a two-day trip, with a campground at the halfway point near Pinney Bridge.

Forester Bill Mittig of Boyne City designed and helped build the trail. Response to it, he said this week, has been

"just terrific."

"It's hard to estimate how many people have walked it, but there is already a well-beaten path," he said.

"In some of the letters I've received, people say it's better than any other trail they have been on anywhere." Mittig said these accolades came from Saginaw and Mt. Pleasant hiking groups which have hiked many trails in other areas of the United States and Canada.

Trail maps, complete with descriptions of various numbered stops along the way, are available at the beginning of the trail and at the Boyne City DNR office.

For people who prefer to drive rather than walk, a ride along the Jordan River Drive at the bottom of the valley is also beautiful at color tour time.

Here's what's cooking

Take it cheezy

WITH GINGER JACKSON

Fall is in the air and on a cold night, a warm cheese dish to serve family or friends will surely take the chill away. Cheese is one of the most nutritional food substances you can eat and certainly one of the most widely used in everything from appetizers to desserts. And the variety of cheese is so great that there is a kind to please everyone.

The first recipe comes from Gordon Lysinger, a friend in southern Michigan who is an excellent cook.

El Gordo's

MACARONI CASSEROLE

INGREDIENTS:

1 1/2 cups uncooked macaroni
1/3 stick butter or margarine
24 ounces cottage cheese (small or large curd)
4 eggs, beaten slightly salt and pepper to taste
1/3 pound feta cheese
1 1/2 cups milk
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
paprika

DIRECTIONS:

Cook macaroni according to package directions. Mix all the above ingredients together except half a cup of cheddar cheese. Pour into a greased pan (9"x13"x2") or two smaller containers, sprinkling with remaining cheese and bake in a 375 degree oven, uncovered, for 40 minutes.

(Gordon wrote: "This may seem like a liquid mess at first, but viscosity will increase as it sits and bakes. This is truly a great dish and only the names have been changed to protect the stomach!" He's right, it's delicious!

From a Boyne City friend...

Linda Dinnell's

APPETIZER CHEESE BALLS
(makes 3-4 dozen)

INGREDIENTS:

2 cups shredded sharp cheddar cheese
1 1/4 cup flour (not self-rising)
1/2 cup butter, melted
36 spanish olives, whole canned mushrooms, drained

DIRECTIONS:

Mix cheese, flour and add the melted butter. Mix thoroughly, working with your hands. Mold 1 teaspoon of dough around olive or mushroom and place about two inches apart on an ungreased baking sheet. Chill for one hour and then bake in a 400 degree oven for 15-20 minutes. Serve warm.

Here's a way to get the kids to eat spinach...

Carol Vernier's

SPINACH CHEESE BALLS

INGREDIENTS:

2 packages (10 ounce size) frozen spinach, cooked and drained
2 cups of dry stuffing mix
1 cup grated parmesan cheese
6 eggs, beaten well
3/4 cup soft butter

DIRECTIONS:

Combine all of the above ingredients and roll into individual balls, about the size of walnuts. Then freeze or cook them. To bake: take frozen balls, place on ungreased cookie sheet and bake for 10-20 minutes at 350 degrees. (Cut the time in half if thawed or fresh.)

Or perhaps you like fondue:
DUTCH CHEESE FONDUE
(serves 4-6)

INGREDIENTS:

4 cups (about 1 pound) grated Gouda cheese
1 Tablespoon cornstarch
2 cups dry white wine
1 clove of garlic, peeled
2 Tablespoons Kirsch (Liquor)
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 large loaf of crusty French or Italian bread, cut into 1 inch cubes (Be sure and use the crust too.)

DIRECTIONS:

In a heavy sauce pan, rub the inside of a heavy saucepan with the garlic. Over medium heat, add the cheese and as it begins to melt, add the wine, a little at a time and stir until the wine and cheese are smooth. Dissolve the cornstarch in the Kirsch and stir into the cheese mixture. Add nutmeg and salt and continue cooking until the mixture is thick and creamy. (If too thick, add a bit more Kirsch.)

TO SERVE:

Place the saucepan (or fondue dish) over a low flame (such as a chafing dish rack) in the center of the table. Place the bread cubes in a bowl on the table along with forks (Long handled fondue forks work the best) and let each person spear a bread cube, dip in fondue and eat. This is not only fun, but good. A nice green salad goes well with this, and it is best when served with a dry white wine to drink.
