Dental exams

Only 54 percent of the country's children go to a dentist regularly, so the East Jordan Elementary School arranges for dentists to come to the children. Five area dentists examined every student in school last Wednesday in assembly line fashion in the school gymnasium. Less than one-third of the students had problems, but those were reported to parents. Participating dentists were David Pray and John Kempton of East Jordan, David Strawbridge of Charlevoix, and Rob Polleys and Arnie Bauer of Boyne City.

Hope to replace doctor by June

Hergt leaving June 1, cites desire to specialize in surgery

EAST JORDAN - Dr. Klaus Hergt's resignation caught Family Health Center officials by surprise last week, but they are now expressing hope that they can find a replacement by the time Hergt leaves June 1.

"I'd like not to have any interruption in service," health center administrator Neal Colburn said.

Colburn said the center's best chance for hiring a doctor quickly would be to recruit a doctor who is finishing his residency training.

Doctors with established practices in other communities would probably need at least six months to close down their offices and move to East Jordan.

Doctors usually complete their residency training by July, Colburn said, which would mean the least amount of lapse in service. There is a possibility that the health center physician's assistant Susan Arndt would be able to handle routine cases for a month between the time Hergt leaves and a new doctor arrives.

Hergt resigned to join the staff of Community Memorial Hospital in Cheboygan, where he will be able to devote more time to surgery.

"The time has come," he said in his resignation letter, "where I must decide to either put aside all my years of training and experience in general surgery... or to make use of my expertise in general surgery where there is a great need."

Hergt was hired by the health center board in December, 1977, and he worked in a temporary downtown office for four months before the center opened in April of 1978. He earns $41,000 a year on his contract which expires June 1.

"My family and I deeply regret having to leave the community we had intended to make our permanent home," he said, "and I look back with pride and a sense of accomplishment of having been a part of East Jordan's effort in establishing the Health Center."

Hergt told The Press that his resignation "wasn't an easy decision. I'll miss the people here. They gave us a fantastic reception when we came to town."

"But it really boiled down to the fact that, to do a good job, you have to keep up your education in your field of specialty. I analyzed the situation, and what is really needed here is a straight-forward family practice physician."

"Maybe I'm rationalizing, but we've got the center running great now. With Neal's know-how and the fully-equipped office we have, I don't think they will have any problem getting somebody out of residency."

'Problem kids' get final shot

BY JOE McELROY

EAST JORDAN - The teacher calls it "the last chance classroom."

The official name is "emotionally impaired" classroom. What it boils down to is that students who aren't able to succeed in this class are probably on their way out of the public school system and possibly into foster homes or state institutions.

The six students in the East Jordan Middle School's emotionally impaired class come from all over Charlevoix County. Why are they there?

Instructor Mike Distelrath describes his students as "kids who are disruptive, who can become physical, who have a very difficult time dealing with their feeling and emotions."

"The emotional difficulties they're having inhibit their learning process."

When a child becomes too much of a problem for a regular classroom, he becomes eligible for the emotionally impaired class. The small class size gives Distelrath more time to spend with each student.

East Jordan and most other area schools have special learning centers for students who have unusual reading and learning problems. Distelrath says learning center teacher Lynn Zimmer and other middle school staff members felt some children needed a different kind of help.

School officials endorsed the idea. Then it was approved by the school board and the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, which administers special education programs. The intermediate district reimburses East Jordan for Distelrath's $12,500 salary.

Many children in the emotionally impaired classes have had problems more serious than those encountered by the average child. Their backgrounds could include broken homes or alcoholic parents. Since children can do little to control the world around them, they often respond to their problems with anti-social behavior. So, although they're basically intelligent, they become serious discipline problems.

"A lot of people see them as hopeless cases," Distelrath says. "Under normal circumstances they could be kicked out of school."

"I don't see them as hopeless. You have to look beyond the surface; try to look inside the kid."

So now the school is giving these children a final shot at succeeding in something close to a traditional educational setting.

"An environment is provided in which they can begin to become aware of their problems and hopefully overcome them to get back into the mainstream of education," Distelrath said.

Distelrath says his students have "for the most part been given this message: 'You're no good.'" He tries to give them the opposite message by arranging "success experiences" in class. This calls for having each student work at his own level, starting where he has a good chance of doing well.

"Most everybody has one area where they can achieve," Distelrath says. "You try to find that area and build around that, giving them the chance to work in that area."

"We give them a lot of positive feedback, so they begin to see themselves as worthwhile people who can be cared about."

But Distelrath feels this can be accomplished best when there are good feelings between the teacher and students. "They're looking for someone they can trust and believe in," he said. This philosophy causes Distelrath to put more emphasis on understanding and patience than on strictness.

Some school officials, although they still support the program, feel Distelrath should be firmer with his students. "There are questions about the approach being used with the kids. That's well-known," Distelrath says.

Superintendent Mel Rullman thinks the emotionally impaired program is a good idea. "It requires a great deal of patience," he said, but adds "It also requires a great deal of strength and firmness."

Distelrath says an occasional observer will only see problems, not the progress he says most students have made. He admits his students swear in class and smoke on school property. "Those aren't big problems to me. To them (Rullman and Principal Doug Shields), it's a big deal."

"You have to let a few things go to deal with the major problems." But Distelrath said he has cracked down somewhat. Students who swear in class are now paddled, and anyone caught smoking is sent home.

Despite their differences of approach, both Rullman and Distelrath think the program is beneficial. Rullman especially likes the placement of the students into volunteer jobs at Grandview Medical Care Facility and in local farms and stores.

"I think that's super," Rullman says. "It shows they're not afraid of a little hard work and they're not doing it for the money."

"This program provides a tremendous service," Rullman said. "I'd like to see it work. It's just a big challenge, that's all."

'Independent' joins county board

EAST JORDAN - Retired rural mail carrier Tom Breakey has been appointed to replace Richard McKinnon on the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

Breakey, 59, lives at 117 Cooperage and he now represents the south half of the city of East Jordan on the 15-member board.

Breakey says he is an independent, but his firmness in not declaring himself a member of the Republican or Democratic Party almost kept him from being appointed to the county board. The board has 13 Republicans and one Democrat.

Republican Keith Annear, East Jordan's other county commissioner, recommended the names of Breakey and Thora Kotowich, a Republican, when the county board was faced with naming a replacement for McKinnon on Feb. 14.

(McKinnon, a Democrat, resigned to take an out-of-state job.)

Board chairman Clyde Cunningham, also a Republican, placed Breakey's name in nomination. With one Republican absent the commissioners voted 7-6 to approve the appointment.

The commissioners thought they needed eight votes, a majority of the entire board, to make the appointment. So the matter was tabled until last Wednesday's meeting.

In the meantime, Annear approached the East Jordan city council about the matter. He and council members agreed that party affiliation doesn't make much difference in local issues and the council voted unanimously to recommend Breakey's appointment.

By the time the county board met last week, they had sought a legal opinion from the state attorney general's office, which said that the 7-6 vote should be allowed to stand. Thus Breakey was appointed. He will attend his first meeting next Wednesday.

"I guess they don't think there's room for an independent in this world," Breakey chuckled when asked about the tangled up affair.

If the new commissioner decides he wants to stay in office, he will have to run for election in the city's August primary and November general election later this year.

By then he will have to choose a political party if he wants to get his name on the ballot. "That's hard to explain to people, but that's the way it is," says County Clerk Clarence Rabach.

The only way Breakey could run as an independent would be to run as a write-in in November, Rabach said.

Boyne City and East Jordan property owners received notices like these in the mail last week.

Boards of review may be busy next week

BY JIM BAUMANN

City and township boards of review will be hearing taxpayer protests next week throughout the county.

More protests than usual are expected in Boyne City and East Jordan, because all residential property tax assessments in the two cities have been updated.

Assessment change notices (a sample is printed above this story) were mailed to all affected property owners last week.

For the first time the county Equalization Department acted as the assessor in Boyne City, East Jordan and Hayes Townships. All three had used local assessors in past years.

Every parcel of property in those three municipalities was appraised by the Equalization Department. Actual on-site appraisals are done only every several years - depending on the city or township.

In years when appraisals are not made, the "assessed value" column on tax notices remains the same. To equalize values throughout the county and state, a "multiplier" is assigned to each city and township to compensate for constantly increasing property values. A 1.06 multiplier might be used the first year to reflect a six percent increase. A 1.12 multiplier might be used the second year to reflect a second six percent increase.

This multiplier is used to determine state equalized valuation, commonly referred to as "SEV". The SEV is supposed to be approximately half of market value.

As a rule, each year the multiplier keeps increasing - perhaps as high as 1.30 or more - until the assessor reappraises all property within the city or township.

Then all of the assessed values are adjusted (usually upwards) for the first time in several years - which usually results in angry, frustrated taxpayers. But it is important to remember that the multiplier is at this time reduced back to 1.00 - or close to it.

At first glance, the sample property tax notice above this story shows a one-year increase in assessed value from $4,900 to $7,600 - a 54 percent increase.

But because the multiplier was reduced from 1.268 in 1978 to 1.0 in 1979, the SEV increased by a lesser amount - from $6,213 to $7,600, or 22 percent. If tax rates (millage) stays the same, taxes on this property will actually go up 22 percent in 1979.

The assessments have been increased by an average of about nine percent in East Jordan and six percent in Boyne City. But individual parcels can vary greatly from that. Some may increase by 100 percent, and some have actually gone down.

In a sense, if your SEV increased by more than the average for our city or township, you may be lucky.

As county Equalization Director Joan Blanchard states in a letter to Boyne City and East Jordan property owners: "If, indeed, your 1979 assessment takes quite an increase, then you have enjoyed an under-assessment in the past few years."

In the case of the sample parcel of property being used as an example above this story, Blanchard's logic is correct. Doubling the 1978 SEV of $6,213 would show market value of $12,426.

But the property sold for $19,500 in 1978 - which more than justifies its 22 percent SEV increase to $7,600. That would suggest a market value of $15,200.

But of course assessing mistakes can be made, and that is why there are boards of review. If you believe your property is assessed at more than 50 percent of market value, you can present your case to the board, and changes can be made.

Mrs. Blanchard advises that protestors be prepared to substantiate their opinion of market value by comparing similar property sales or by presenting documents from a certified assessor.

All boards of review are meeting next Monday and Tuesday. Some are also meeting on additional days. Schedules for many of them were printed in the Feb. 22 and March 1 Charlevoix County Press.

Non-teaching school employees far from contract agreement

BOYNE CITY - School district officials and the district's cooks, custodians, bus drivers and secretaries appear to be far from settling contract disagreements which the employees' new union made public recently.

The school employees last spring joined the Michigan Educational Support Personnel Association. The union is a division of the Michigan Education Association, which represents teachers in collective bargaining.

Union employees and the school district still haven't signed a contract for the current school year. This has prompted union contract specialist Kay Habitz to accuse the district of "foot dragging."

"They just don't want the union in there," she said. "If you don't want a union, you don't sign a contract."

The school district has hired a labor negotiator of its own. Marsha Orr of the Michigan Association of School Boards says the employees are asking for an "outrageous financial package." She said the union is seeking benefits that Boyne City's teachers presently don't receive, such as dental insurance, tax annuities and better health insurance.

Although the employees say they are a long way from a settlement, they stress that they are not considering any strike action. "We haven't even thought of that," says Verlin Thompson, a high school custodian who is the local union president.

Thompson doesn't see any need for a strike. "Eventually," he says, "they're going to have to talk to us."

Thompson said the non-instructional employees decided to unionize because, "We had no representation. We weren't being heard."

"We felt what we were asking for was not getting back to the board." The union represents approximately 40 employees, he said.

Thompson said custodians' starting pay is $3.75, but he said fringe benefits, not salary, are the stumbling blocks in negotiations.

"We haven't even discussed pay yet," he said. "That has nothing to do with it." He and Habitz claim the school system is trying to take away fringe benefits the employees have had in the past.

One such benefit is personal leave days. Employees in the past have been able to take two days a year off without having to give any explanation. Now the district doesn't want to give leave days without being given sufficient reason.

Orr says personal leave days were intended for special, unusual circumstances, such as signing papers for a home mortgage. Sick days are a separate category.

"But now they are looking at it as vacation days," she said.

Negotiations were held last week, but no progress was reported.

New bank

This mobile home will apparently be the home of a branch office of First National Bank of Petoskey on highway M-75 at the edge of the Boyne City limits. A sign at the site says the bank will be opening soon, but bank officials aren't sure how soon. That depends on the outcome of a protest suit filed by Northwestern State Bank, which is still pending.

School hosts 400 for Reading Rap

BOYNE CITY - More than 400 educators were on hand for the third annual Reading Rap, a one-day seminar for reading teachers held Thursday at the elementary school.

The conference was organized by Sherry Sheldon, Boyne's Title I director. She and several other area reading teachers decided to hold the conferences, held at a different school every year, so that Northern Michigan reading teachers could get together to exchange ideas.

"We were wondering what we could do to help one another," Mrs. Sheldon said, "and this area didn't have any conferences. It's nice to get some up-to-date information in the area of reading."

Four of the many teachers giving presentations were from Boyne City, while three others came from East Jordan. Kindergarten teachers Dorothy Pfahler and Marilyn Hartwick gave a talk on their Crossties program, which helps young students develop social and emotional skills.

Learning center teacher Jackie Jordan told about teaching students with visual and hearing problems, and Phyllis Hosier discussed word banks, a method of improving vocabulary and reading skills.

Arline Rullman and Jamie Baumann from East Jordan discussed that school system's parenting class, while Pam Allen gave a presentation on the new reading program at the East Jordan Middle School.

Mrs. Sheldon said the visiting teachers were impressed with the new elementary school. "We heard lots of favorable comments," she said. "They thought it was a nice, cheery building."

EJ downtown project should succeed now

The East Jordan Chamber of Commerce is making a new effort to revitalize the downtown business district, and we think the project has a good chance for success.

Several years ago, a similar effort failed to get off the ground. Taxes and financing were the problems then. But new developments in those areas offer the possibility of significant help.

So the Chamber is trying again. The board of directors is inviting all local business owners to attend a meeting next week. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the American Legion Hall on Main Street.

If the businessmen are interested -- and we are sure they will be -- their first goal will be to agree on a common building theme for their building renovations. Then they will have to do some background work to set up the machinery to make the project financially possible.

What makes anybody think a downtown business renovation effort will succeed now?

First of all, the state legislature has recently passed a Commercial Redevelopment Act that allows cities to give 12-year tax breaks to businesses which are remodeled or rebuilt.

Editorial

The law seems tailor-made for towns like East Jordan. When a renovation project was proposed six or seven years ago, many business owners were reluctant to participate because their property taxes would go up. Even if their business increased, the profits might easily be gobbled up by the higher tax bill. So, they reasoned, why risk it?

The legislature recognized that property taxes were acting as a reverse incentive for business renovation all over the state, and the new law is designed to combat that.

The East Jordan City Council must first set up a redevelopment district defining where the tax breaks will be given. We feel the council will see the logic of granting the tax breaks. In the long run, taxes will still increase, and the economic health of the community will improve.

Further assistance for businesses planning to remodel may be available from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The city may qualify for a program that would provide loans at three percent interest.

So the city, state and federal governments will all be called upon for assistance in this project. But the first step is up to East Jordan's business community. If it's going to work, the merchants will have to show their support at next Tuesday's meeting.

Literary contest winner

'Desire for knowledge'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story was the winning entry in the Winter Literary Contest held recently at Boyne City High School. Senior Shelia Sloop was chosen winner of the short story competition by the two teachers and two students who did the judging.

Next week The Press will publish the winning poem. Another contest will be held in the spring, according to journalism teacher Rick Fowler.

DESIRE FOR KNOWLEDGE BY SHELIA SLOOP

Benjamin plugged himself into the learning machine that stood on his bedside table. It said over and over:

"I want to learn. I must learn all I can in my lifetime."

The words echoed in his brain, words that he had heard since his birth. They slowly molded his speech and his dreams. He lived in the year 2065, a year when man had finally discovered the purpose for living. After years and years of searching, mankind, encouraged by the Educators, the rulers of the realm, realized that the supreme goal of man was to learn all he could in his lifetime. Man had decided that it was unimportant to form opinions on knowledge or put the knowledge to use as earlier generations had wasted their time doing. It was only important to advance this knowledge.

The words from the learning machine continued for an hour and then some new words began coming from the machine. It began teaching; over and over it gave the formula for calculating the distance to the moon. Then again it switched back to the monotony of the words:

"I want to learn. I must learn all I can in my lifetime."

This was the system the Educators had devised for increasing man's Desire For Knowledge. Benjamin climbed into bed with these words echoing in his brain. He knew that he must be encouraged by these words. He must have Desire For Knowledge.

Tomorrow would be the final step. He would take a DFK (Desire For Knowledge) test. This test would determine if his DFK was high enough to allow him to enter the congress of his country, the Educates General, as it had been determined at his birth. Benjamin remembered his first DFK test.

The Educator required everyone to take one at age five. His DFK had been that of a normal twelve year old. He took it again at the age of ten. It was discovered then that his DFK was that of a normal twenty year old. He was told that his DFK score was high enough to allow him to marry. He waited though, because he was in love with a girl, Andrea, whose DFK score, although she was eight years older than he was, was not high enough to allow her marriage privileges.

Benjamin thought about how different it would have been if his DFK score had been lower. He might have ended up as an elevator operator as his cousin had. His DFK had been under 260 and according to law he was only allowed to work at such menial tasks. Or worse yet, Benjamin could have ended up as his brother, who spent the time writing poetry and philosophizing. He had been, as the Educator had tactfully put it, "disposed of". His DFK had been under 100. It seemed that he did not want to learn, but he wanted to put his knowledge to use; a crime in his country.

Now, looking at his sleeping wife, Benjamin thought to himself, "at least Andrea and I are fortunate in our children." All three of their children's DFK had been monitored at birth as being high. Their daughter had achieved her potential DFK (275) and had become a businesswoman. His two sons were professionals: one had followed in his father's footsteps and became a lawyer, (his DFK had been so high that he received his law degree when he was nine.) The other had become a doctor with a potential DFK score to become a surgeon.

Now he must prove himself. He was forty years old; an age when he was considered useless as a lawyer. A memo from the Educator's office had told him that he had not achieved his potential DFK as monitored at his birth. He must strive for a score over 600, it said. He must move out of the law profession and make room for those with lower potential DFK's. A seat was open in the Educates General. It had been determined at his birth that he would occupy this seat if he lived up to his potential DFK. If not, he would be disposed of.

He wasn't the least bit nervous when he entered the testing room the next morning. Benjamin was confident that he could achieve his potential high DFK. The familiar DFK monitor was placed on his head and recorded his DFK brain waves. He completed the test with ease.

It wasn't until the next week that Benjamin learned his score. It had been 599, one point too low to make the Educates General. He received another memo from the Educator, "Report to Disposing Center number 18. You have failed."

Benjamin hurried to Andrea to tell her the news. She turned to him and said:

"We will simply learn without you."

He then told his children who told him it was bound to happen. He had squandered too much time on emotion, on love for his wife and children. This would bring any man to his downfall.

Benjamin accepted his disposal as a fact of life. The ridiculous doctrine of life after death had long been removed by the Educator. He had never loved life enough to be sorry to leave it. Love of life was unimportant in this country, only love for knowledge mattered. Apparently he had not had enough of this either; he was caught in between.

The next morning Benjamin reported as ordered to the Disposing Center. It was painted a bright cheery yellow. Once inside, he was lead by two brightly clothed disposers to the disposing chambers. He was told to sit in a huge, almost comical, cushioned chair. He waited patiently in the yellow disposing chamber for the final jolt that would mean the end. He heard Andrea's emotionless voice saying, "We simply have to learn without you." He realized the oblivion he was to face.

"Andrea, Andrea!" he screamed, "It's wrong! It's wrong!"

Then he felt the jolt and the disposal was complete.

In the control room of the disposal chamber, two men sat. It was their job to press the button to create the disposal.

"They often do that," one said to the other, "The Educator says it's a defect in their makeup. I would not want to end up like that."

"All I know," said the other, "is that I want to learn and I must learn all I can in my lifetime."

Board of Review are meeting in townships all over Charlevoix County checking property assessments. I hope they've read that stuff in the papers about President Carter calling for a reduction in taxes.

I have the answer for those who want a new automobile without all those financial worries, interest charges, heavy down payment, trade-in, dickering, etc. It's simple. Just go down and pay cash for the fool thing.

Yesterday, I was sipping coffee in the Depot restaurant, reading the horrors of life in the morning paper. The large, black headline said: "800 convicted of housing frauds." The lady at the next table spoke up. "That's nothing," she said. "I've been housing a fraud ever since I got married."

I drove my car into a parking space and the sign on the building read: Unauthorized vehicles will be towed away.

And I got to thinking. Where is "away"? I've looked all over Boyne City and I haven't been able to find "away". Even tow truck drivers don't seem to know where it is. I asked a policeman where "away" was and he looked at me as though I were one of those nuts who writes a newspaper column. A whole week has passed and I still don't know where "away" is. Stuff like that makes me mad.

Some of the things in this column do not make common sense. Which isn't too unusual. I've had readers tell me that in the past there have been times when common sense drove them batty.

Searching for Utopia

EDITOR'S NOTE: In northern Michigan, an area where long-time residents find themselves living with tourists and new, transplanted neighbors, the thoughts of Chicago-based columnist Sydney J. Harris on the subject may be of particular interest.

What do you think about what he has to say? We'd be glad to print your comments.

• Rural life is better than urban life if you can make a living there and don't mind the pressure for conformity.

• Urban life is better than suburban life if you can afford to send your children to a good private school and you don't hate dirt.

• Suburban life is better than urban life for families in the lower middle brackets, if you don't mind being an unlicensed chauffeur.

• Urban life is better for creativity, although it offers too many distractions and the competition is frantic.

• Rural life is better for creativity, although it fails to provide enough stimulation and it is tempting to fall into a rut.

• Suburban life offers too many distractions and too little stimulation: too many activities and too few challenges.

• Rural life is best for the young and the old; urban life is best for the singles and the divorced; suburban life is best for the mothers, but worst for the husbands and the children.

• Suburban life is best for the Wasps; urban life is best for Jews and Catholics; rural life is best for fundamentalists.

• Urban life is best if you are very rich and can afford to leave whenever you want to; suburban life is best if you are middle-class and want to achieve the illusion of comfort; rural life is best if you are poor, because you will never feel squalid and will always have enough to eat. (Except in such devastated regions as Appalachia.)

• Suburban life is best for a precarious marriage, for husband and wife don't have to spend much time together, which is a severe test of compatibility; urban life is worst for a precarious marriage, for mates are thrown together willy-nilly at every turn, while opportunities for covert dalliance are far more numerous.

• Rural life tends to produce children who are healthy, relatively well-adjusted and dumb; urban life tends to produce children who are neurotic, restless, and smart; suburban life tends to produce children who are more rebellious than rural children and more naive than urban ones.

• Urban life gives ulcers, hypertension, and heart attacks; suburban life gives nervous breakdowns, alcoholism, and migraine; rural life gives arthritis, hernia, and premature senility.

• The optimum place to live is in a farmhouse at the edge of a middle-sized town, with a university, near a large lake, in the temperate zone. But who can be so lucky?

Getting the word out

Editor,
We sincerely appreciate the assistance you have provided us in our effort to recruit adult foster care homes. The article that appeared in the Feb. 15 Charlevoix County Press was accurate, comprehensive, and much appreciated by our staff.

We have already received a few inquiries that will hopefully lead to additional licensed foster homes for Charlevoix County.

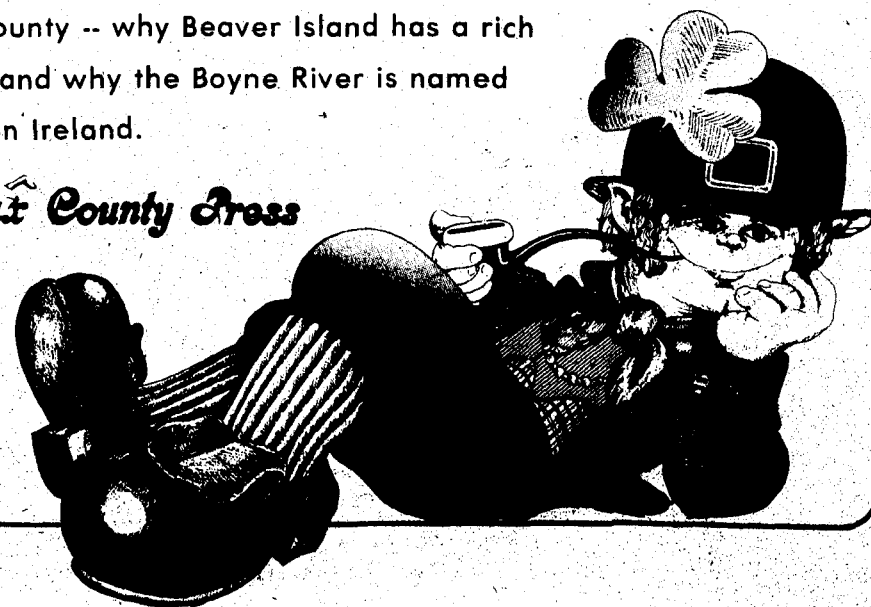

Live it up on St. Patrick's Day!

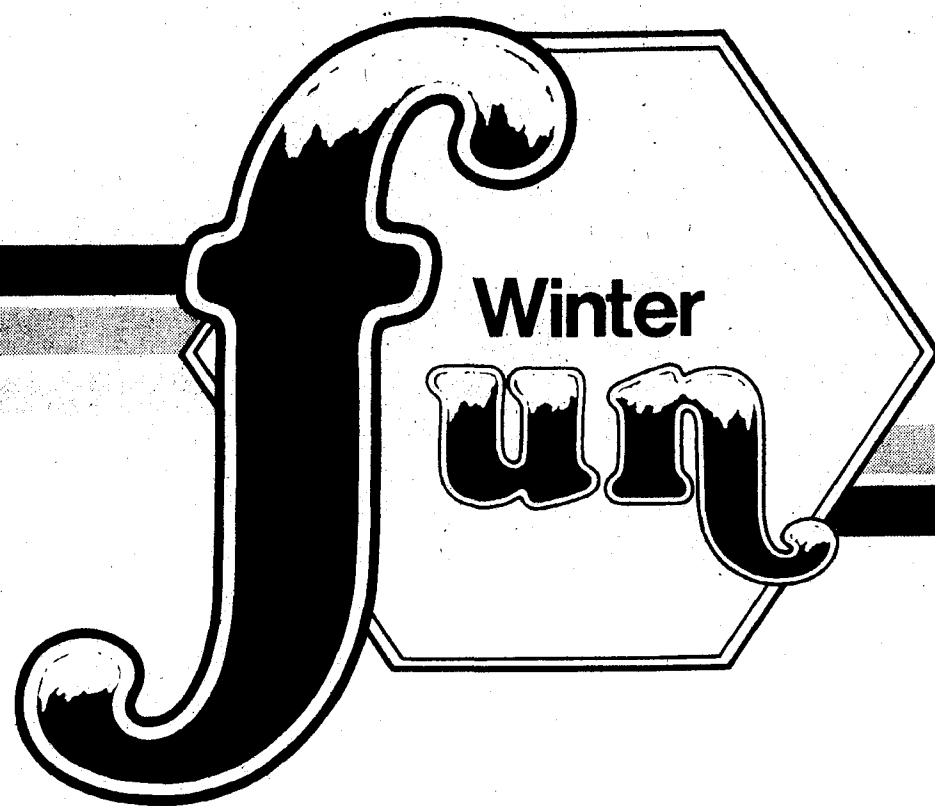

This year, St. Patrick's Day (March 17) falls on a Saturday. It's traditionally a day for celebration and Saturday night will make it even more so in area restaurants and bars.

The Press will be devoting next week's Winter Fun section to the occasion, telling you where to go for fun on this night of merriment.

There will also be articles about "the Irish connection" in Charlevoix County -- why Beaver Island has a rich Irish history, and why the Boyne River is named after a river in Ireland.

Winter doesn't bother serious joggers

BY CAROL J. WINDSOR

Walking is too slow and running is too fast, but jogging is just right for three Boyne City area women -- and their friends.

Sandy Kadrovach, Bev Grienke and Nan Polleys don't let winter cut into their jogging time, either. Mrs. Grienke, the most avid of the group, says she runs six or seven miles a day every day.

Mrs. Grienke has been a serious jogger for about a year and a half. She became interested in the sport, as did Mrs. Polleys through Sandy Kadrovach, the pioneer jogger in the Boyne area.

"I know what it's like to be a 'long ranger,'" Mrs. Kadrovach said of her early jogging days six years ago.

She read an article in the book section of a women's magazine that year about a new book by Mildred Cooper called "Aerobics for Women." Aerobics is a program of exercises aimed at bettering circulation and respiration to improve health and prolong life.

She wasn't involved in sports and describes herself as "housebound." The book suggests rope skipping, swimming, climbing stairs, walking, bicycling, running and jogging as ways to reach exercise goals.

Mrs. Kadrovach said she tried skipping rope. Skipping rope for more than two or three minutes is too strenuous for beginning exercisers, she said. She started walking, which took "too much time." Then she turned to jogging.

By her second year of jogging, she was up to eight miles a day, and feeling good.

"I was excited about it, but people looked at me like I was nuts," she said.

She admits that the first year or two, she didn't look forward to having to get out and jog. "I dreaded it all day," she said. But she liked what it was doing for her, mentally and physically.

"I felt good about myself, more alive. When you're talking to a fellow jogger, they know what you mean," she said.

One of her main reasons for taking up jogging was to "get streamlined." She said she never noticed a great change in her figure, but "I know I'd found something that made me feel good."

Sandy Kadrovach on jogging: "I feel good about myself, more alive."

Jogging was hard for Mrs. Kadrovach at first. After running, she was exhausted, her legs ached, and she had difficulty getting enough air into her lungs.

She has since gotten many people involved in jogging and says, "I'm amazed at how easy it is for them." One of those who eventually became interested is dentist Rob Polleys, her employer. She laughs remembering his early reluctance to participate.

"He used to say, 'I've only got so many heartbeats in a lifetime, and I'm not going to waste them on exercise,'" she said.

One day she told him she had run a mile without stopping, and he said, kidding, "If that little broad can do it, so can I," she remembers.

He has since become a jogger, involved enough to run in the Boston Marathon last year.

Mrs. Kadrovach has sustained no injuries in running, but several summers ago had a scare when she was running with two men who live nearby.

They were running six miles that day, and they saw, ahead on the hilly road, a boy coming toward them walking in the middle of the road. As they drew near him, glancing toward him, they concluded he was drunk or high on drugs.

Passing him, they looked at each other, and the runners continued, only to realize that he had begun running behind them. He never said a word, but continued to keep pace with them for the next mile-and-a-half.

When Mrs. Kadrovach turned into her driveway, he continued to run behind the men. She called her friends' home to see if they had arrived without harm and found that he had turned off shortly after she had. It was a mysterious meeting, with no further contacts, and "He was a good runner," she said.

She enjoys scenic two-track dirt roads for her daily run, but sometimes she runs the seven miles to work.

The difference between jogging and running, she says, is the speed at which the participant moves. Jogging is doing a mile in seven minutes or more, Mrs. Kadrovach says. She runs a nine-minute mile, as a rule.

It's a relaxed sport, she says, with time for visiting with friends and learning from nature. "We have some of the greatest therapy sessions when we're running," Mrs. Kadrovach said. She hasn't won any trophies in races she's entered, but she enjoys the races because she's around other runners.

"I like to do it, but I'm not good," she said. Beating her own times is challenge enough, she said. "I don't have that competitive drive, like Bev," Mrs. Kadrovach said.

Bev Grienke runs seven miles a day, every day, and may be one of the fastest women in her age group in the state.

Slippery streets and cold winter air might make some joggers hang up their shoes for the winter, but not these women. They often meet after work and run together. From left are Nan Polleys, Bev Grienke, Janet Hills, Sandy Kadrovach and Donna Bragenzer.

Last year she entered nine races and placed either first, second, or third in eight of them in the 30 to 39 age bracket.

"There aren't that many running in my age group," she says, modestly. But her 120 pounds on her five-foot-eight-inch frame mean she's built like a runner. She even ran a five-mile race on her wedding anniversary last year.

Mrs. Grienke has been running for a year and a half and says it helps her stay healthy and keeps her weight down. She's lost 15 pounds since she began running.

Winter jogging has no more hazards than jogging during any other season, she says.

The worst thing that happened to her was the time she was running on a dark highway, fell, caught herself with her hands, and tore one hand open. When she got home, she cleaned it up as best she could, but the next day she had blood poisoning.

She also had a stress fracture around

What does winter mean to you?

BY CAROL J. WINDSOR

When you live up north, WINTER FUN is:

... Knowing that spring can't be far behind when you see a fish shanty being trundled down the road on the back of a sagging pickup truck.

... Seeing a flag above a 10-foot snowbank and knowing that a vehicle is waiting at the stop sign.

... Sharing a four-wheel drive vehicle while your "standard" car sits in the garage, waiting for the thaw.

... Shoveling driveways, sidewalks and roofs, then locating enough containers to catch drips from the leak in your living room ceiling.

... Enjoying white snow instead of the brown stuff that downstaters are used to.

... Hiding under fat down jackets, mufflers and hats, knowing full well a diet is on the way when spring requires stripping them off.

... Pacing that pile of firewood to make sure that it lasts all winter because the snow is too deep to cut more.

... Making sure there's always an extra can of coffee and quart of milk on hand, just in case the snow cuts you off from civilization.

... Placing bets on when the ice breaks up on the nearest body of water.

... Seeing the caved-in roofs on area businesses and buildings, and being sorry and glad at the same time -- glad that a bucket, not the living room ceiling, is on your living room floor.

... Hearing a friend say, "You always wanted a house with pillars. Now you have one," as he points to the four giant icicles that block the home's doorway.

... Knowing that -- as the saying goes -- we have nine months of snow and three months of company, and each makes the other bearable.

The Whistle Stop

The Whistle Stop in Boyne Falls may be the only restaurant in the area where you can read the tables. That's because the wooden tables are decorated with newspaper clippings, photographs and mementos of the Boyne area's early logging and railroad days. The family restaurant, operated by owner Barbara Bates and her daughters, also offers such specialties as homemade chili, soups, omelettes and vegetarian meals, including a vegetarian submarine sandwich. The Whistle Stop is located on the northeast corner of the intersection of M-75 and highway 131.

Jogging: 'It's my time for me' one foot from running on a hard surface. Winter weather slows down a runner's speed, and Mrs. Grienke has fallen "quite a few times," but if the runner is dressed properly, little can harm him, she says.

"I really get oblivious to traffic," she said, and her friends can testify to that. One overheard a conversation in a Boyne City restaurant where one person said, "Bev Grienke is going to get killed yet. We just about ran her down."

She has always been health conscious and has participated in athletics for many years.

She looks forward to a race being planned for the Boyne area sometime this year. Her husband, Ray, is chairman of the race committee. Although the dates haven't been determined, they hope to make it a six-mile jaunt.

Like Mrs. Kadrovach, Mrs. Grienke says she feels better about herself since taking up running.

"During the time I run, things come to me that might not otherwise. I become more sensitive," she said.

Her intensity as a jogger is at the other end of the scale from Nan Polleys. Mrs. Polleys runs four miles a night, four or five nights a week. She says she misses jogging when she doesn't do it. "It's my time for me," she said.

"I think you can carry it to an extreme," she said. "We're not on an evangelistic kick."

She began running five years ago when, she said, she was suffering from a "tremendous lack of accomplishment." As a young mother, she realized she wasn't taking enough time for herself. Jogging has done a great deal for her self-esteem, she said.

In addition, "It makes you too tired to think about minor illnesses."

She sets out at about 5 p.m. "That's about when things are saying to blow up around here," she said. She laces up her $30 running shoes, dons her $22 jogging suit (won by her son Will in a drawing last year) and sets out.

Last year the Polleys lived in a rural area, and jogging was "really gruesome." The conditions were not ideal "in the snow with a flashlight," she said.

The books say winter is the ideal season for jogging, she said, but last year's Boston Marathon, in which her husband ran, had perfect conditions. The temperature was about 50 degrees and there was no sun for the 26-mile course, she said. It was at the end of March.

A muscle spasm in her neck within the last month, the result of running in warm weather after dressing for cold weather, was painful for a couple of days, she said.

Her running gear is dictated by common sense, she said.

"I prefer not to look very snazzy because I'd feel silly out there running my three miles in a $1,000 suit," Mrs. Polleys said. She thinks it's important to wear bright colors, however, for safety.

She points to the benefits of jogging, saying it's a good way to develop leg muscles, lower blood pressure and encourage a better frame of mind.

It may not make you thinner, but it firms the body. Mrs. Polleys said she takes a size smaller dress now than when she started running. "I can wear a blouse tucked in," she said.

She laughs at those who are joggers to the exclusion of other activities. Magazines for runners promote this mentality, she said, referring to one recent article about the bugs you eat when you're running and whether they're poisonous. They're not.

"My occupation is a wife and a mother, not a runner," she said.

But you won't catch her, nor either of the other women, saying as Calvin Collidge did, "I do not choose to run."

School ski outing

Students from the learning center class at East Jordan Elementary School were treated to a cross-country ski outing last week. Eighteen of the students spent a day skiing at the Dennis and Mildred Gocha farm. The Gocha's provided lunch and showed the 18 students around their farm. Skis were provided by Schafer's Store of Boyne City. The outing was planned by learning center teacher Peg Johnson, but she had plenty of chaperoning help from her husband Steve (who also snapped this picture), teacher aide Pat Shoemaker, student teachers Carrie Sood and Wendy Kimble, and city recreation director Jane Buxton.

PROPERTIES

Time saver

These two men are about to look over some property. But they'll be doing it by watching television. It's a new concept of real estate marketing, introduced for the first time in this area last week by Charlevoix Properties. Company president Gene Steele says the major advantage of the color video tape system is that it is a time saver. "This saves us a lot of time, as well as saving the buyer time," he said. Prospective buyers can preview property before they visit the site. The video system also makes it possible to show property without intruding on the owners at an inconvenient time.

Six out of 10 people asked said yes. Here are some of the comments:

No. Russia has a much better defense than we do and we should catch up.

No. According to Jack Anderson, our battleships are in bad shape and need repair. The military men are not paid or trained properly. We should concentrate on building up our military now before it is too late.

No. We should improve the military men's attitudes by paying them first a fair amount for defending our country.

Yes. They're spending far too much. It is my belief that no powerful government can plan for both peace and war at the same time.

Yes. The government should spend more money on how to keep peace.

Next week's question will be: "Do you think the city of East Jordan should spend $70,000 to renovate the back of the senior citizen center to be used as a community center?" Call in your comments, please.

CLARENCE F. RABACH, COUNTY CLERK

CLYDE CUNNINGHAM, CHAIRMAN

Here's what's cooking

'Day before' dishes

WITH GINGER JACKSON

Whether you're having a few friends over for lunch or entertaining a large group, it's always nice to have a few new and different dishes that can be prepared the day before.

You'll spend less time in the kitchen the day of your party, and more time enjoying your friends. (Incidentally, the following menu is excellent for buffet luncheons.)

The first recipe can be assembled a day ahead, adding the potato chips and cheese just before you pop it in the oven. (It's actually better if mixed beforehand, because the flavors blend together.)

HOT CHICKEN SALAD

(Serves 6)

INGREDIENTS:

3 cups cooked chicken cut up in 1" cubes
2 cups diced celery
1 cup mayonnaise
½ cup toasted almonds
½ cup chopped walnuts
½ cup sliced water chestnuts
2 teaspoons grated onion
¼ teaspoon celery seed

½ teaspoon salt
2 cups crushed potato chips
1 cup grated mild cheddar cheese

DIRECTIONS:

Combine all the ingredients (except potato chips and cheese) and mix well.

Place in a well greased casserole cover and refrigerate until ready to bake.

To bake, sprinkle with cheese and potato chips and place in a 375 degree oven for 20 minutes until hot and bubbly. Do not over cook because it's better when the celery is crunchy instead of soggy!

Since the hot chicken salad is a very filling main dish, there's no need to serve much more with it. A nice green salad, whole cranberry sauce and buttered hot rolls seem to complement the main dish without being too much to eat.

After your guests have devoured lunch let them relax while you disappear into the kitchen to clear the "dishes," make the coffee and serve the dessert.

FINNISH WHITE CAKE

INGREDIENTS:

1 cup butter (melted and cooled)
4 eggs

1½ cups sugar
1½ cups flour
¼ teaspoon vanilla extract

DIRECTIONS:

Mix eggs and sugar in a bowl until white. Add the flour a little at a time, then the butter and vanilla. Mix until very smooth and pour into 2 well greased and lightly floured round cake pans.

Bake in a 400 degree oven for 20 minutes or until toothpick comes out clean.

Allow to cool slightly and turn out onto rack.

Spread each layer with whipped cream and any of the following sliced fruits:

peaches

blueberries

Sprinkle with sugar and place one layer on top of the other. Refrigerate until serving.

This cake is heavy, similar to a pound cake, and is very filling, so smaller servings are adequate after a large meal. (It is also better if prepared ahead of time.)

Have fun cooking for your friends, but stay out of the kitchen!

District finals Friday

At least one team from Charlevoix County will be playing in the finals of the Class C district basketball tournament at Onaway Friday night. Game time is 7 p.m.

The winner of Tuesday's Boyne City vs. Rogers City contest will be one of the teams in the finals. (Late results of that game are elsewhere in this issue.)

Either Charlevoix or East Jordan will be the other team in the finals. The Charlevoix Rayders whipped Onaway Monday in the first game of the tournament.

they'll meet East Jordan at 7 p.m. Wednesday to decide which squad will advance to the finals.

JV volleyball

Men's league leader falls

It was quite a shootout. As a matter of fact, it's a wonder the scoreboard didn't blow a fuse.

After the dust had settled, East Jordan Iron Works had succeeded in knocking off Tri-City Basketball League leader B&C Market 125-119.

Even more startling than the number of points scored is the fact that B&C rallied from 30 points behind to tie the game at 111 and send it into overtime. But the Iron Works prevailed.

Mike Reidle led the scoring parade with 56 points for the winners. Backing him up were Steve VanderHyde with 28, Kevin Griffin with 13 and Brad Rullman with 11.

Brad Upton paced B&C with 37 and Ken Gahn added 22, while Tim Hardy and Dave Peck each had 16.

The upset leaves B&C tied with FBT Industries for first place in the second round standings. Both have 5-1 records. FBT pulled out an 80-77 victory over Northwestern State Bank. Brian Farrell hit 24 points and Jim Danbert 23 to lead the winners. Al Looze collected 26 for the bank, and Kirk Kujawski added 18.

In another close game, Boyne River Inn stayed within a game of first place by nudging Sir Jack's, 79-76. BRI fell behind 24-12 after one quarter of play, but by halftime, they had closed the gap to 39-38.

Bill Anzell took scoring honors for the winners with 21, and Kim Hocquard added 16. Tim Crego had 24 and Rob. Britt on 20 for Sir Jack's.

Bill Anzell took scoring honors for the winners with 21, and Kim Hocquard added 16. Tim Crego had 24 and Rob. Britt on 20 for Sir Jack's.

3-M Gas also stayed one game out of first place with an easy 108-75 thrashing of Stevens Concrete. Bernie Kondrat pumped in 27 points to lead 3-M, and Alan Gasco and Terry Erber added 23 and 23 points, respectively. For Stevens, Jim Baumann scored 24 points, and Ken Doty added 18.

Parrish Chevrolet won its first game of the second round, 119-54, over Charlevoix County State Bank. Dale Tims had 38 points and Tom Beyer 27 to pace the victory. John Chew scored 15 and Larry Chew chipped in 12 for the bank.

THIS SUNDAY'S SCHEDULE: In Boyne City, B&C vs. BRI at 6, and Northwestern Bank vs. Sir Jack's at 7:30. In East Jordan, Stevens vs. Parrish at 6, and Iron Works vs. County Bank at 7:30. In Boyne Falls, 3-M vs. FBT at 6.

Slow start dooms Boyne

BOYNE CITY - A 15-4 first quarter deficit proved to be the margin of defeat for the Rambler varsity basketball squad Friday at Rogers City.

The Hurons closed out the regular season for both teams with a 67-56 victory.

Boyne coach Russ Harvey said his squad's 23 percent shooting performance in the first half was the key to the loss.

"Offensively, we did a poor job. Our defense wasn't that bad, and we stayed with them in rebounding but we had too many turnovers against their press right at the beginning of the game."

After falling behind 37-18 at halftime, the Ramblers shot 47 percent to make the game respectable in the second half.

Center Dean Hicks popped in 13 points to lead Boyne's scoring, while Scott Hausler added 10.

The Ramblers ended their Michigan-Huron Shores Conference action with a 3-10 record, ahead of cellar-dweller Grayling which was winless in 12 league games.

Gaylord and St. Ignace tied for the league championship with three losses apiece. (Gaylord won 11 games and St. Ignace 10, but the league title is determined by the number of losses. A Grayling-St. Ignace game was cancelled because of a flu outbreak in Grayling.)

Petoskey and Charlevoix tied for third place in the conference with 8-6 records. Cheboygan and Rogers City tied for fifth at 7-7.

Mat coach hopes for more student interest

BOYNE CITY - Wrestling coach Terry Drew has a simple answer when asked how he enjoyed his first year as a coach at Boyne City High School.

"It was an experience," he sighed. "I loved it."

Drew said the highlight of the season was the Charlevoix Invitational. The team didn't finish high in the standings, but Drew was proud that every Boyne wrestler won at least one match in the tournament.

Top performers for the wrestling Ramblers were junior Ken Kruzel, who finished with a 19-9 win-loss record, and senior Steve Mittig, 15-6. John Sims wasn't far behind at 14-11.

Lack of depth hurt the team, which had to forfeit matches in some weight categories because there was nobody to compete. Drew said the team had to face three to five forfeits, worth 18 to 30 points, in every meet.

"There wasn't enough student interest," he said. "That won't be solved until there's a coach in the school with a wrestling background."

Drew doesn't work for the school and said he and the school administration haven't decided whether he will coach wrestling again next year. He said he has encouraged several potentially good wrestlers who didn't come out this year to compete next year.

If the team can add some depth, the future looks better. The only senior on this year's team was Steve Mittig.

EJ whips Loggers by 99 points

EAST JORDAN - The Red Devil basketball team dealt winless Boyne Falls its second 99-point loss of the season last Friday.

It was also the Loggers' 19th loss without a victory. The Red Devils improved their record to 12-7 heading into Wednesday's district tourney opener at Onaway.

East Jordan buried Boyne Falls 35-8, 31-5 and 39-10 in the first three quarters to pass the 100-point mark before the fourth quarter even started.

Six Red Devils scored in double figures, led by Jeff Burch with 26 points, Dennis LaPeer with 18, Don Trojanek 14, Dan Spence and Duane Cutler 12, and Tim Kraemer 11. Tom Mons led the Loggers with nine points.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS
DANGER SIGNALS

DR. PETHERS

Q. I have what might be called partial paralysis in my right leg. Sometimes the leg feels perfectly normal. At other times, it becomes extremely numb. Sometimes there is pain in the leg and other times it just tingles. Now and then it seems to go completely "to sleep," and I have to sit down and slap my thigh to "wake it up."

I've had this problem for over 20 years... since I was a young girl. It has never been so bad that I couldn't do my housework, but lately it seems to be getting worse. The numbness is more frequent and stays with me longer. Often, it happens while I'm asleep, and I awake unable to stand up. I never know when it is coming or when it will go away. Quite frankly, "I'm worried."

A. Numbness or pain in the legs is one of the eight danger signals everyone should be aware of. Others are painful joints, stiffness of the neck or trunk, loss of sleep, headaches and pain between the shoulders.

These critical symptoms may be the forerunners of more serious conditions. They indicate that spinal pressure and tension on nerves are robbing your body of essential nerve conduction. You should seek a thorough chiropractic examination to determine the underlying cause and what can be done about it.

Long strike brings workers together

Pickers at Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Company say they're weary of the strike.

BY KAY SEVERINSEN

When one employee at Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Co. went on strike last October, he and his wife made a list of the things they couldn't do without.

At the top 'o' the list: toilet paper. "You need a sense of humor," he explained.

That is all that some families have left after months without work. Top O' Michigan office workers had no strike fund, but enough donations have been trickling in to give each worker about $15 to $20 a week.

And since most are eligible for food stamps, no one is starving, but they're watching every penny.

"We stick together and help each other out," said Tom Schewe, who is the primary supporter of his wife and three small children.

"Like, the other day, one of us got a deal on a whole truckload of potatoes. So now everybody is eating potatoes. You learn to do without things. My parents used to talk about the Depression, but it never meant anything to me until now."

The strikers have been scrounging up odd jobs wherever they can. Schewe has found occasional electrical wiring jobs. Will Roisen has been shoveling roofs and scrubbing walls.

For some, finding other jobs can be an emotional experience.

"I guess it's demoralizing in a sense," said Roisen. "I'm not sure how to describe the feeling I have when I ask for work and the person says, 'If you didn't like your job, why didn't you quit?'"

"A lot of people don't have any sympathy for strikers. They know I had a job and I turned my back on it because the situation was intolerable. But when I do find work, in a sense it makes me feel good to have something else to think about."

The only thing more boring than walking a picket line, he quipped, is being the security guard hired by the co-op to watch the picket line.

Since there are only about 20 strikers at Top O' Michigan, each one pickets about 20 hours a week, said Yvonne Hocquard, who is on the negotiating committee.

She admitted she is weary of the strike.

"I want to go back to work," she sighed. "I'm on the picket line from 7 a.m. to noon, then I've been working in the kitchen at the middle school. At night there are meetings or the phone is ringing. You can't set your mind on anything else."

Except that now Hocquard does have something else to think about: her husband, Dick, and daughter Kristen both work at Courter's, where the 400 employees went on strike a couple weeks ago.

"It's real hard, when you're used to two paychecks to suddenly just have one," she said. "But now that Dick isn't working either, I don't know what will happen. Lots of times when our $15 or $20 donations were passed out (to electric strikers) I would give mine to someone who needed it more, because we had Dick's paycheck. Then last week, one of the men here gave me some of his money. It makes you feel so..." Her voice trails off.

But the sharing and the companionship born during a strike are felt by everyone.

"At Christmas," recalled Tom Schewe, "we got three food baskets from friends. But you see, now they are more than just friends. And there were no toys for the children (ages 7, 3 and 1½) but it was probably the best Christmas we ever had. We had nothing, so everything meant more to us."

The Roisens had similar experiences. "I've learned to accept gifts," Shirley Roisen said. "I may never be able to repay some of them, but maybe I can help somebody else someday."

The strike has brought the workers closer to one another, too.

"We used to crab at each other in the office," Roisen said. "You know, like someone's handwriting isn't readable, or someone else is popping gum. Those things are all forgotten now. You start looking at your co-workers in a different light."

So is this what Courter's strikers have to look forward to? Perhaps. But Courter's strike is not expected to drag on as long as Top O' Michigan's, and Courter's has another distinct advantage: a strike fund of $40 to $50 per week per worker.

"We even have coffee and donuts provided by the (United Auto Workers) union," said Ruth Hartwick, a Courter's striker. "We're a lot better off than Top O' Michigan. Most of us haven't felt the brunt of it yet. We just got our last paychecks Friday (Feb. 23)."

But Courter's strikers have a different problem -- boredom. They only walk the picket line four hours a week.

"I'd rather be back at work," said Diane Cronn. "It is boring (being on strike). There's only so much cleaning you can do at home. And you can't run around much because of finances."

Faced with hours of free time and empty wallets, many of the Courter's workers are looking for part-time work.

"Right now," said one worker, "anything you want done in this town, you can find someone to do it. Everybody's looking for work."

Negotiations planned

BOYNE CITY - Negotiating sessions are planned for this week in the strikes at both Courter and Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Company.

The first bargaining talks since the Courter strike began Feb. 19 will be held this Thursday.

Further negotiations with Top O' Michigan employees were set for this Wednesday.

In a related development, the committee which has petitioned for the recall of the electric company directors has scheduled the fifth in a series of public meetings for this Sunday.

State Rep. Charles Varnum of Manistique will be attending the meeting, which will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Boyne City High School gymnasium.

May open in fall

Savings and loan OK'd

BOYNE CITY - A group of area residents received preliminary approval Tuesday for their plan to start a savings and loan in Boyne City.

The state Financial Institutions Bureau notified the group about the approval through their attorney in Grand Rapids.

Arch Wright, one of 11 investors who joined together to start the savings and loan, left for Grand Rapids soon after learning of the decision Tuesday.

"I won't know much until I read the entire letter," Wright said. Basically, he explained, an administrative law judge "ruled solidly in our favor" in considering protests from nearby Northwestern Savings and Loan of Petoskey and Family Federal Savings, which has branch offices in Petoskey and Charlevoix.

The Boyne group had made application for state approval in January of 1978.

Wright said the exact name, location and opening date for the savings and loan -- as well as other details -- have not been finalized yet.

"We'd like to open in the fall," he said, "but that's just a target date."

The incorporators who are proposing the savings and loan include Wright; Don Toffolo, Frenchie Poinseau, John DiMartino, Arnold Bauer, Dee Adgate, Gert Neymark, Harold Hill, Jim White, Andy Bogema and Dick Wulff.

Boyne loses in district, 57-56

BOYNE CITY - The Rambler basketball team led most of the game before dropping a 57-56 district tournament decision to Rogers City Tuesday night.

The loss at Onaway ended a difficult season for Boyne, which has a 4-14 record. Rogers City advances to the tournament finals on Friday, playing the winner of Wednesday night's game between East Jordan and Charlevoix.

Rogers took a 14-12 lead after one quarter of play, but Boyne pulled out to a 30-24 halftime lead with an 18-10 advantage in the second quarter. The Ramblers still held a 43-40 lead after three quarters.

But the Hurons took advantage of nine Rambler turnovers in the fourth quarter to pull out a victory.

Junior forward Scott Hausler had what Coach Russ Harvey said was his best game of the season. Hausler poured in 10 points in the second quarter and 19 for the night. "He did a super job all over the floor," Harvey said.

Dean Hicks added 11 points, and Pat Anzel had 10.

Loggers drop 20th game

BOYNE FALLS - Coach Bernie Corpe still found a few positive things to say Tuesday night after his Logger basketball team ended its winless season with loss number 20.

"Well, we played one good quarter," he said. Later he added: "We'll have everyone back next year. I don't have one senior on the team. We won't be a great next year, but we'll be a lot stronger."

Tuesday's loss was by an 80-39 margin to Alba in the Ellsworth district tournament.

Junior Don Green led the Logger scoring with 16 points. Sophomores John Hausler and Pat Harmon both added eight points.

Harmon and Green were starters, but Hausler was playing his first game for the varsity and scored his eight points coming in off the bench.
